Denver, Colorado And F. G. Bonfils Living One Mile High In Pike's Peak Shadow

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features Synd., Inc.

DENVER, COL., Aug. 16—Denver is the biggest city and the capital of Colorado.

The fine State Capitol, with a dome as fine as that in Washington, D. C., reminds you that this is a gold state. Its dome is gilded with 22-karat gold.

You stand on the 15th step from the top, at the western entrance to the Capitol, and you are exactly one mile above the ocean's level.

Journey to Colorado Springs, on your way to Pike's Peak, and you are two miles above the ocean. Climb the Peak or motor up on Mr. Penrose's perfect motor road, and you are nearly three miles above the ocean. Here you live high, and in good health.

Height makes a difference. In Denver the atmospheric pressure on every square inch of your body is 20 per cent less than in New York. This means that your lungs work harder to draw in the oxygen. That is good for them.

A man from the East came here many years ago with a $20,000 life insurance policy, sunken cheeks, a sad eye. The insurance experts looked him over, gave him, mentally, six more months to live, offered him $10,000 to cancel his policy. The man accepted, started a furniture business with the money, and is still running it. He's rich, and, says your very "hunky informant, "He's huskier than I am."

Fred G. Bonfils owns the Denver Post, and the Denver Post owns Denver, or, at leasta it is by long odds the most powerful thing in it. That newspaper blankets half a dozen states, has more circulation than its competitors, more Sunday circulation than all the other Sunday newspapers in Colorado and three states adjoining.

Mr. Bonfils does not hesitate to put things plainly. Of the Denver Post, he says, simply, "FIRST IN EVERYTHING," and lets it go at that.

In the postoffice this morning you saw an eight and a half pound rainbow trout, just caught, frozen into a solid block of ice. That, says Bonfils, is the kind they catch here. It is no exception. In the little house next to Buffalo Bill's grave, up on the mountain top, Johnny Baker asks you to stay and eat one just as big.

For trout weighing 10 pounds, Bonfils gives a reward of $50, and for eight-pound trout, $25. These big trout eat the little fish and should be exterminated.

Once, in the crater of an extinct volcano, near here, in a Government forest, Bonfils watched a band of 200 mountain sheep. A mountain lion sprang from the woods, killed one sheep and its lamb. So Bonfils pays $25 bounty for mountain lions, and has persuaded the State to add $50. At $75 each, mountain lions are vanishing.

Men came here first to find gold, and on the hilltop where Buffalo Bill lies beside his wife the Indians looked out for ox trains slowly crawling. They saw them, in the clear air, three days before they could arrive, which gave plenty of time to prepare a reception for them.

Now you see no Indians, but white people, with automobile licenses from every State in the Union, winding up and down 1000 mountains. You never saw so many mountains. And as you look westward at the great wall of foothills and granite masses beyond, you might start and travel hundreds of miles and still be mountain climbing.

Gold is still plentiful, and millswork industriously, pouring the waste into Bear Creek, and

Latest Message Says "All Well on Board" as Airliner Sights Russian Steppes

Berlin, Aug. 16 (AP)—A Moscow dispatch to Vorwaerts says the Graf Zeppelin passed over the Ural Mountains from Europe into Asia at the town of Nadezhdinsky, 350 miles northeast of Perm and 1100 northeast of Moscow.

Moscow, U. S. S. R., Aug. 16—The Graf Zeppelin speeding to Siberian steppes today passed over the village of Pojevska, northeast of Moscow, at 1 a. m. Central European time (8 a. m. Boston daylight saving time).

What Thousands Saw Over City Today

U. S. Navy dirigible Los Angeles snapped from the roof of the Boston Evening American building as she glided over Boston today in her cruise over New England.

LOS ANGELES SAILS OVER BOSTON

Majestic Queen of the Air Watched in Admiration as She Passes By Fighting a stiff cross wind and with speed considerably reduced, the Navy dirigible Los Angeles passed over Boston just before noon today.

As the big silver airship droned its way over the downtown section at an altitude of less than 1000 feet, rooftops were thronged with workers who left their desks, machines and benches for an unobstructed view of the dirigible.

She came in over Newton from Worcester and Marlboro, passed over Brookline and Jamaica Plain and then headed for the Custom House tower.

So strong was the wind that the big gas bag was at an angle of approximately 20 degrees as she fought the drift.

Passing the Customs House, the dirigible reached a point over the navy yard in Charlestown and dipped in salutation. Then she

GARRETT GETS DEATH THREAT

Assignment to night street duty in uniform and a threat that he would be "bumped off" were handed Patrolman Oliver B. Garrett when he reported today at Station 3, Joy st.

The former liquor and vice squad head raider reported in at his new division headquarters for roll call this morning before beginning his two weeks' vacation.

He drove up to the station in a yellow roadster at 7:40 a. m. for call at 7:45, and in the absence of Capt. James McDevitt received his instructions from Lieut. John McGrath.

He was ordered to report in uniform for street duty at 5:50 p. m., August 31. He will have alternating early and late shifts, starting at 6 p. m. and 1 a. m. No beat has yet been chosen for him.

Lacking a uniform he was told to report at the supply department of Ex-Mayor James M. Curley (top), who brands religious charges made by Louis K. Liggett (bottom) as "untrue." Liggett said Curley had inspired anti-Catholic move in late campaign.

HOOVER MAY BE CALLED BY EX-MAYOR TO TESTIFY

Story That He Inspired Bigotry in the Campaign Is "Slander," Says Curley

The possible appearance of President Hoover as a witness before a Suffolk County Grand Jury was predicted today by former Mayor James M. Curley.

Demanding a grand jury investigation of what he termed "criminal slander" on the part of Louis K. Liggett, Republican national committeeman who accused Curley of circulating anti-Catholic literature during the last campaign, the former mayor called at the district attorney's office today.

He had previously retained Sherman L. Whipple as his attorney in the case.

Because of the absence of District Attorney William J. Foley on vacation, the former mayor conferred with Foley's assistant, Frederick T. Doyle.

An arrangement was made whereby Mr. Curley and District Attorney Foley would meet to discuss the matter.

"I demand a grand jury investigation of Mr. Liggett's charges and of their publication," said Curley. "I desire to have called before the grand jury Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Bishop Cannon, Hubert Work, chairman of the Republican national committee and the editor of the Forum.

"It may even be found necessary to summons President Hoover. President Hoover was not unaware of bigotry charges."

CONFERS WITH COUNSEL

Former Mayor Curley conferred with Sherman Whipple at the latter's office and arranged for another meeting tomorrow.

"Liggett made the worst possible statement he could make to damage a man's character," said Mr. Curley. "Before this case is ended it will shake Boston, Suffolk County and the nation."

Democrats are aroused over the Republican leader's remarks, which followed a speech at Fall River in which he decried the injection of the religious and prohibition issues into a political campaign, and assailed the direct primary, blaming all three for the party's defeat last November in the presidential poll.

LIGGETT IS SILENT

Liggett was silent over a demand from his own party ranks that he resign. The demand was put forward by Mrs. Elizabeth Tilton as representing the women proponents of prohibition in the Republican party.

Chairman Frank J. Donahue of the Democratic state committee, criticizing Liggett's Fall River speech, declared:

"Bigotry was so rampant in the Republican party last fall that it even defeated for renomination in the primaries a Republican Senator and three Republican Representatives, all members of the Catholic faith."

Liggett's remarks regarding Curley were in reply to a statement by Donahue that the Republicans raised the religious issue and that "Mr. Liggett ought to have known

PERFECT START AUGURS WELL FOR SUCCESS

EXCLUSIVE

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND

World-renowned newspaper correspondent, who crossed the Atlantic aboard the Graf Zeppelin on its first transatlantic cruise, and who is writing the story of the Hearst-Zeppelin Round-World Flight.

(Copyright, 1929, in the United States and all other countries, except Continental Europe, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited. Copyright, 1929, in Continental Europe by August Scherl, G. M. B. H., and by Ullstein.)

Aboard the Graf Zeppelin, Aug. 16—(Via Norddeich Radio)—We crossed the Volga, famous Volga, at 1 o'clock this morning.

Karl von Wiegand

We crossed the Russian border just about 10 miles south of Dunaberg (Vinsk) at 2:45 p. m., Eastern daylight time, and were making 67 miles an hour. This was 8:45 p. m., local time, and before us there was a big moon and a clear sky. We were heading for Moscow, but Dr. Eckener warned that weather reports indicated a storm ahead in mid-Siberia, and intimated that we might be forced into the Arctic regions to avoid it.

Dr. Eckener suddenly changed his course at midnight, from Moscow to the northeast, which leaves Moscow approximately 200 miles to the south of us. He said:

"Deeply regret I cannot meet the wishes of the Soviet government, but Moscow and other points east report headwinds.

"It is such a long flight I cannot assume the responsibility of deliberately and knowingly heading into contrary winds, which would mean retarding us many hours.

"Therefore, I am deviating back to the upper edge of the high pressure area, now about 120 kilometers away. Our ground speed is about 74 miles an hour."

USE FOUR MOTORS

The streets of Berlin were so filled with people that it looked like an ant hill to us. Danzig seemed to go frantic; Koenigsberg, too, gave us a royal welcome.

Dr. Eckener appeared to be deeply touched with the greetings in East Prussia, severed from Germany by a Polish corridor after the war.

We passed over Koenigsberg about 11:15 a. m. (New York D. S. T.) and over Tilsit, in East Prussia, at noon, New York time.

The Graf Zeppelin, as if knowing that the eyes of the world are upon it, made good once more on the first day of the second leg of the Hearst-Zeppelin globe-encircling flight.

In the first 12 hours, from the departure at Friedrichshafen until we passed over Koenigsberg on the day afternoon, the Graf Zeppelin made a very satisfactory run of approximately 750 miles, with only four motors at an average speed of about 62 miles an hour.

"I am satisfied with the day's run, which, having little or no helping wind, was good on four motors," said Comdr. Eckener as we stood on the bridge together while passing over Koenigsberg.

"Of course," he continued, "I would have liked the speed we made coming from New York but we cannot expect that every day."

PLEASED WITH SPEED

Just as we entered the Polish Corridor, the ship was rocking softly in the gusty winds. When we reached Stettin, the wind turned to the East and we took it on the side. Sir Hubert Wilkins remarked.

"It rocks just enough to make it interesting."

We had an excellent luncheon. Comdr. Eckener, at the captain's table, has Lady Drummond Hay, Dr. Megias, Wilkins, Leeds and Richard E. The last named two, however, did not show up, being still asleep.

Stettin, below us on the Baltic, is laid out geometrically to the smallest anyway, and forms an unusually pretty picture for us as we pass speedily above, trying to head into the wind.

Although we have only four motors working, the ship is making almost regular cruising speed, and Dr. Eckener is confident the trip will be shorter than at first calculated. We have made good progress.

Wilkins has been sitting all morning on the window-ledge, watching the beautiful landscape of middle Germany reel off below like a film. Occasionally, he taps the typewriter in front of him. Lady Hay, as usual, has disappeared in her cabin and is busily at work tapping out the story of the flight.

Japan All Excited Over Prospective Visit of Zepp

Tokio, Aug. 16—Intense excitement prevails throughout Japan in anticipation of the arrival of the Graf Zeppelin on the Hearst-Zeppelin world tour.

Permission has been given Comdr. Eckener to fly over the Imperial Palace gateway and dip the airship's nose in honor of the Emperor and family who, however, are now at the seaside.

Special Zeppelin engineers at the Kasumigaura airfield have advised Eckener to attempt a landing between 5 and 7 o'clock in the morning (4 to 5 p. m. Boston time the previous day) to avoid the heavy fog from a nearby lake.

The Hamburg-American local agents have arranged a special train to convey the Hearst-Zeppelin tourists and the Graf's crew to Tokio while the airfield forces are planning a simple Japanese ceremony to celebrate the safe arrival of the great airship.

The social calendar for the first day includes visits to high government officials and luncheon at the Imperial Hotel under the auspices of the Imperial Aviation Society.

The second day will be devoted to a reception at the German embassy and theater parties.

The Navy Department today announced it had placed navy vessels in readiness to aid the dirigible in any possible emergency.

The public will be allowed at the hangar on the day of the Zeppelin's arrival to inspect the airship and tens of thousands of Japanese are expected to rush to the vicinity.

Mayor Horikiri announced he would present a blue porcelain vase to Commander Eckener on behalf of the Tokio municipal government. It is similar to the vase presented the Duke of Gloucester here recently.

Graf Zeppelin Over Siberian Steppes

said the Graf's commander, Dr. Hugo Eckener, expected to pass over the Urals at about the center of the mountain chain before 6 p.m. (12 noon Boston time). Kovno had picked up a wireless message to that effect.

"All well on board," the messages said of the Hearst-Zeppelin round-the-world tourists and the crew of the airliner.

There was considerable speculation here as to the exact route the Zeppelin had followed after entering Soviet Russia for some indications pointed to a veering northward, then southeasterly.

She was sighted at Viatka, 500 miles northeast of Moscow at 10:30 a. m. (4:30 a. m. Boston time), said a wireless message received just before noon.

Her position at that time was reckoned at the 48th degree of longitude. She had picked up speed and was heading due east.

CHANGES COURSE

Apparently, Dr. Eckener was bending back to the trans-Siberian railway route.

He had set his course from Viatka for Ustsolsk, where the Russian population is already a negligible minority among the tribes of the Urals.

Ustsolsk is roughly 225 north northeast of Viatka and is just below the 62 parallel of latitude. Along this course Dr. Eckener would head far into the north of Russia before crossing the Urals into Siberia in the direction of the Ob river valley.

The Ob river empties at the Arctic circle into the Gulf of Ob and the Kara sea, east of Nova Zembla.

If Dr. Eckener struck east from Ustsolsk he would skirt the Arctic circle a little south of it, following a course much further north than any he had been expected to take into the northern Steppes of Siberia. Ustsolsk is in European Russia.

Previously, at 5 a. m. (12 p. m. Thursday, Boston time) a radio from the Graf said it was 62 miles east of Volgogda.

At 2:05 a. m. (4:05 p. m. Thursday, Boston daylight time), the dirigible gave its position as over Wychni-Wolotschok, about 175 miles northwest of and midway between Moscow and Leningrad, old capital of the czars.

VEERS FROM MOSCOW

Early reports today that the Graf was heading for the Arctic circle were based on announcement that she had been sighted over Vologda, about 275 miles northeast of Moscow at 4:45 a. m. (10:45 p. m. Thursday, Boston daylight saving time).

The entire population of the town turned out to see her as she roared overhead, at high speed.

Owing to reports of a violent storm over mid-Siberia, Dr. Eckener had been forced to veer to the north of Moscow, thus disappointing thousands who had anticipated a glimpse of the Zeppelin.

STRIVE TO HALT HAGUE BREAK

The Hague, Netherlands, Aug. 16 (AP)—Last-minute efforts to reach an agreement on the financial question and plans looking toward evacuation of the Rhineland were in progress today at The Hague.

Premier Briand of France called on Foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany and again talked about evacuation of the Rhineland, while Emile Francqui, Belgian delegate, called on Philip Snowden, British chancellor of the exchequer, with a formal proposition from the other creditor powers.

It is understood Great Britain was offered 60 per cent of its claims, or about 30,000,000 marks a year (about $7,500,000), to be included in the unconditional annuities.

Premier Briand told Foreign Minister Stresemann that the second zone of the occupation of the Rhineland, the Coblenz Bridgehead, will be evacuated by the middle of November.

When M. Francqui made his proposal to Chancellor Snowden, he also made a detailed reply of the creditor nations to the chancellor's argument, in the course of which Francqui declared British interests had been far better cared for in the reparations settlements than the chancellor had admitted.

The four countries, on whose behalf Francqui spoke, were France, Italy, Belgium and Japan.

A paper bag containing $20,000 worth of securities and two false teeth plates disappeared from the custody of Dr. Joseph Poscher, of 112 Shirley ave., Revere, somewhere between Revere and Boston today.

Dr. Poscher reported to the police of station 2 that he did not know whether the bag was stolen, or whether he left in on a Narrow Gauge train.

The securities were not negotiable.

BROKER IS HELD IN R. I. BANK ROBBERY

Uxbridge Man Admits Being in Slatersville Day of Holdup

Slatersville, R. I., Aug. 16—Held in connection with the $3000 holdup of the First National Bank here, Carl Houckett, 40, Uxbridge insurance agent, fumed in a cell today while fellow Rotarians, Odd Fellows and Masons arranged to retain counsel for him.

Houckett, president of the Brotherhood of the Congregational Church at Uxbridge, former member of the school committee and a member of the executive committee of Blackstone Agricultural Society, has been positively identified as the armed bandit who robbed the bank.

Identification was made by Charles E. Seagrave, Jr., cashier of the bank, who has known the insurance man for years, and is a member of the same fraternal organization.

Several other residents of Slatersville identified Houckett as the man they saw in the vicinity of the bank yesterday morning, dressed in overalls and wearing linemen's spurs and a false mustache.

Houckett has admitted to the police he once owned spurs, and now possesses two guns, one of them a .45 automatic similar to that used by the holdup man.

IN TOWN BEFORE HOLDUP.

He has also admitted that he drove through Slatersville shortly before the robbery, and that he has had experience with makeup in amateur theatricals.

He denied, however, any connection with the robbery, and expressed his confidence that he would be cleared of suspicion and that Seagrave would acknowledge he had made a mistake in his identification.

In the meantime five fellow-Rotarians from Uxbridge, headed by Charles Matthews, mill agent, arrived at Slatersville, but were not permitted to see the prisoner. They were joined by Odd Fellows and Masons, many of them members of Houckett's church, and plans were made to retain counsel for him to fight the charges.

Chief of Police William J. Allaire left for Woonsocket after stating he would apply for a warrant charging Houckett with robbery.

At the same time a search was being made of the Uxbridge home of the insurance man in an effort to find the loot which is missing. Police say Houckett's Massachusetts number plates have new bolts, which may indicate that they were recently replaced. The bandit's car, of the same type as the insurance man's, carried Rhode Island plates.

In an interview with the Boston Evening American, Houckett protested his innocence. He declared how he might break the news to his wife, now visiting in New Jersey with her two children by a former marriage.

PROTESTS INNOCENCE

"I cannot understand what this is all about," he said. "When I got home last night, my mother-in-law told me that the police of Slatersville wanted to talk to me about an auto accident over here. I went out to find out what they wanted me for. I knew that I had not been in any auto accident yesterday.

"Now I don't want to create the impression that Mr. Seagrave has deliberately involved me in this affair. My business and social meetings with him have always been enjoyable ones and I think that he has made a mistake in identifying me.

"This unpleasant part of it is that yesterday I saw no one who would help me in proving that I had nothing to do with this robbery. I went near the bank at 10:50 o'clock but not by it.

"I did not have a gun with me yesterday. Neither did I wear pole climbers or overalls.

"Yes, I have guns. I have always had them. I am what you might call a 'nut' on guns.

"This is the second time that I have been taken into custody as a suspicious person in connection with an armed robbery. In 1930 I was taken off a train in Detroit when the police there mistook me for a Chicago gunman."

LINDY HITS 112 MILES IN AUTO

Detroit, Aug. 16 (AP)—For a man who crossed the Atlantic in a day and a half, 112 miles an hour is not so fast, but Col. Charles A. Lindbergh did that on a Detroit automobile company proving ground track, and after a half-hour of skidding around the concrete oval, the flying car, he could scarcely be persuaded to stop.

The flying colonel averaged 106 miles over a 2¼-mile track with banked curves, but hoisted his speed to 112 miles on the stretches.

A visit to the proving ground to test the new Packard Diesel airplane motor gave Lindbergh the opportunity to do his speeding.

Seasick Swimmer Quits

London, Aug. 16 (AP)—E. H. Temme, who started at 10:05 p. m. (4:05 p. m. E. S. T.) to swim to France from South Foreland gave up his attempt after 10 hours. He became seasick. Temme swam from France to England in 1927 in 14 hours and 29 minutes.

headed for the Boston airport, where another dip was made.

Nearly a score of planes, from the Boston airport, from Denison airport in Atlantic and from the naval air station at Squantum, were in the air as the dirigible crossed the city.

The planes kept high above the gas bag, however, and on the sides, none approaching nearer than half a mile.

It was 11:15 a. m. when the huge silver "cigar" was swighted in the southwest, and she took at least 15 minutes to cross the city.

From the airport the dirigible headed up along the North Shore, to pass over Lynn, Salem and Gloucester before returning to the Hub and then pointing for Lakehurst, N. J., to end its New England tour.

The northernmost point reached by the dirigible was Concord, N. H., and on the way up and on the return trip it passed over more than a score of major cities in Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

Taking off from Lakehurst, N. J., late last night, the big dirigible, "Queen of the Navy Airfleet," loaded up the coast, passing over Newport and Providence, then over Brockton and Boston to Manchester, N. H., where the good-will flight officially began.

In her cruise from Manchester the airship, in the order named, passed over Portsmouth, N. H.; Newburyport, Haverhill, Lawrence, Lowell, Nashua, N. H.; Fitchburg, Gardner, Worcester, Marlboro, Boston, Lynn, Salem, Gloucester, Salem, Lynn, Boston, Quincy, Brockton, Providence, Newport, R. I., and then headed for Lakehurst.

The trip was planned several months ago, but was deferred because of bad weather.

who financed the distribution of such literature."

"I do know that a mass of anti-Catholic literature was circulated in this State during the last campaign, but not one particle of it came from the Republican party," said Chairman Liggett.

"I do know that it was circulated and paid for by one James M. Curley, now seeking the office of mayor of Boston.

"I do know that Mr. Curley did this dastardly work because he knew that it would greatly damage the Republican party and improve the position of the Democrats."

SAYS LIGGETT SHOULD KNOW

"And furthermore, Mr. Donahue knows this—or if he doesn't know it, then he doesn't know his job."

The Democratic Leader Donahue commented: "I know that Mr. Liggett is not a religious bigot and that his views on the liquor question savvy have been extremely liberal. Mr Liggett must have known, however about the circulation of the mass of anti-Catholic literature in his State during the campaign last fall as an astute politician he should have known who financed the distribution of this literature.

EXCLUSIVE

By SIR HUBERT WILKINS

Famous explorer, who crossed the Atlantic aboard the Graf Zeppelin from Friedrichshafen, and is writing the story of the Hearst-Zeppelin Round-World flight.

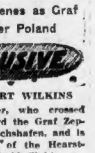
Aboard the Graf Zeppelin, Aug. 15 (Radio via Norddeich)—At 6 minutes after 3 o'clock this afternoon, we crossed out into the Baltic Sea.



Sir Hubert Wilkins

The country over which we have been passing is most fascinating. The landscape, low and undulating, showed only a small percentage of good crops between Berlin and Stettin. The welcome for the Graf at Berlin was not wholly what was expected, only two airplanes coming up to greet us.

Stettin, over which we just passed, is a striking town when viewed from the air. The streets radiate from a central circus in a geometrical design and the town just seems to spend itself naturally at the limits.

The wind has been varying from 12 to 20 miles an hour. We got under the cumulus clouds at 2500 feet near the German-Polish frontier, where extensive forests mingle with the cultivated land.

Poland is sparsely populated and has very bad roads—at least that is the impression from the air. The general poverty, even, is noticeable. There is no machinery and every farm has its horsepower plant. Large groups of women are at work in the fields.

Danzig's welcome was stupendous. Airplanes greeted us and the factory sirens screeched us in and out of the city. Flags and handkerchiefs were flung to the breeze, and the curious shaped cathedral viewed from sixteen hundred feet.

its towering spire as a token of regard.

NOTED PILOTS IN AIR RACE

Los Angeles, Aug. 16 (AP)—Seven nationally known pilots today had entered the non-stop air race between Los Angeles and Cleveland, which starts Sunday as a feature of the national air races.

They are Capt. Frank Hawks of Los Angeles and New York, holder of coast-to-coast non-stop records for both eastward and westward flying; Lee Schenkair, transcontinental flier, who, on a recent non-stop attempt from Los Angeles to New York, was forced down in Kansas; Bob Cantwell of Tulsa, Okla., winner of last year's class "C" race from San Francisco to Los Angeles during the national air races; John H. Wood, winner of last year's national air tour; Harry J. Brown, Cleveland air mail pilot; Oliver G. Labouttiller of New York, and Art Goebel of Hawaii, the Dole flight from California to Hawaii in 1927.

2d-Story Workers Ransack House

Peabody, Aug. 16—Second story workers stole jewelry valued at $300 from the home of Mrs David O'Neil in Lowell at 1. Other more valuable jewels were overlooked by the burglars, who ransacked the house.

The loot obtained included a woman's diamond ring, a woman's wrist watch and a man's gold ring. Entrance to the premises was gained through a second story window which was left open when the family went away for the day.

PEOPLE BELOW WAVE FRANTIC GREETINGS

EXCLUSIVE

By LADY DRUMMOND HAY

Only woman passenger who will make the Heart-Zeppelin Round-World Flight.

Aboard the Graf Zeppelin, Aug. 15 (Via Friedrichshafen Radio)—Berlin's streets were black with people. The city thrilled all those who are making their first trip aboard the dirigible, but the rest of us rather missed the usual boisterous welcome scenes and whistles.

Lady Drummond Hay

The capital was exceptionally impressive and beautiful from the air under the sunlight.

Noon gilded Stettin, the birthplace of Capt. Fleming, who was touched at the idea of saluting his native town, on this special day.

During luncheon the clouds were gathering ahead, but Dr. Eckener, by whose side I was sitting, explained to me:

"We are passing through low pressure area."

But he also promised that the historic free City of Danzig soon would be revealed. Sure enough, the weather wizard was right, as always.

Danzig soon lay beneath us, as clearly defined as a map, while the German population frantically waved and cheered and sirens screamed and whistles blew in unrestrained excitement and rejoicing such as rarely recorded the Graf.

No matter how frequently the cities on our route render the courtesy of an aeroplane escort, it is always fascinating and a practical, moving sight to watch the machines curve and cavacole in their aerial greeting.

OVER CRUISER

After the Danzig planes left us our way lay over the grey Baltic. Our last glance at the "Free City" showed the highlights of the city glittering in the sun through the Northern Gate mists, and a placid river on which was floating timber from Poland to the sea, the treacherous marshlands fringing and gleaming white seashore which seems to stretch indefinitely from right to left.

At the mouth of the river lay a large steamer, broken in two and in utter agony, shivering in the quivering currents. Farther along we got a superb vision of the slender German cruiser Koenigsberg—from one Koenigsberg to another.

Now we are heading inland to Dunsberg on the Russian frontier, over a country thick with forests and scattered towns and villages. The Graf Zeppelin is making over 60 miles an hour on four motors, with a satisfactory day's run to her credit.

Comdr. Eckener and his officers are in the best of humor in the control room, relaxed and happy though, naturally, they are keenly alert and watchful.

Most of the passengers are sleeping in their cabins. A few are dozing in the salon. Klemkin, the Russian, is sleepless and alert. There is no tension anywhere, but there is ever-increasing interest and keyed-up anticipation of Siberia, the white Arctic mystery land.

ALL AT WINDOWS

Aboard the Graf Zeppelin, Aug. 15—(dropped at Berlin)—From 4:36 o'clock, when we rose from the ground, until 7 o'clock, when the first tinkle of teacups announced a welcome breakfast, the passengers could not tear themselves away from the windows.

How quickly they are declaring themselves! Even Leeds and Rickard, both young and full of the high spirits of adventure and the joy of life, could not pit their gramaphone for long against the massed company of all these learned professors and technical experts who form the major part of the passenger list.

Pencils are flying along books and fluttering pages are crackling the learned brows furrowing in sympathy with the still more grim learned wrinkles.

But even the great must eat! Bread, butter, tea, coffee and sausages help digest many a complicated observation. The cameramen, Robert Hartmann and Baron von Perckhammer, the art photographer, worked with evergreen enthusiasm.

Capt. Lehmann sighting the baron's unconventional attire of baggy golf breeches to the knee and heavy shoes and no socks, remarked thoughtfully:

"I would like to see all the passengers dress in evening dress for dinner, as on steamships. Perhaps, when we inaugurate a regular schedule of passenger transatlantic flights they will do that and help make the tiny salon festive."

I reminded him that only Europeans don evening clothes every night for dinner by routine habit. American men do not like doing it.

Breakfast over, many went to sleep to try to catch up on some of last night's lost hours. Leeds, Rickard Comdr. Rosendahl are snugly rolled in their blankets and Lieut-Col. Iselin and Dr. Megias were writing fortunes away in postcards at $1.75 a stamp.

Sir Hubert Wilkins is dreaming by the window and Karl von Wiegand is working faster than ever on his dispatch to be dropped off with this at Berlin. The Japanese, Drs. Enti and Kitano, are hammering the western keyboards of their typewriters. I do not know why, but it does seem rather strange to watch the Japanese, whose language we all know to be so complicated, writing as fast as anyone else, in English on the typewriter.

The Japanese have been very silent and busy this morning. Comdr. Fujiyoshi is clad in his dark uniform and busies himself tremendously in corners with maps and charts.

It is a warm morning, even as early as when we flew away. We are very low now, at 1200 feet, and it is positively cold even as high as 2850 feet.

Young Ernst, the cabin-boy, is so eager to see Berlin, over which we are to pass at about 10:30, that he is running about with field glasses almost as big as himself, mistaking every town for his Vaterland's capital.

LIKE A DREAM

Even Capt. Lehmann and Capt. Schiller were telling me over the breakfast table that it hardly seems real we are speeding toward Japan. The passengers, too, are continually saying:

"It seems like a dream; indeed, it is—a dream of men's ambition to conquer the elements, to conquer space, to conquer nature's barriers, which, since the world began, have effectively segregated the races and the peoples of the nations."

Mountains, rivers, arid deserts and lowlands have not been dammed the tide of history since the days of Adam and Eve. Without presumption, but in gratitude for the power of scientific and mechanical achievement, our little band of 60 souls is adventuring in full faith and confidence on this pioneer expedition, fully realizing that success will not be man's alone, but God's mercy to those who have labored in humility to reap the secrets of the elements and follow the ungentle path of self-sacrifice and disillusionment in the trail of that inexorably exacting taskmistress—knowledge.

The all night festivities and dancing and early departure from the hotel were jammed with superficial excitement or genuine emotion.

The farewells in the airship hall gave way to nothing less than awe as the passengers, in silence, watched mother earth recede beneath their gaze, with mighty motors throbbing and straining and pulling gallantly under their heavy morning-hour load.

Less than five minutes after scheduled time, the giant airship was released to the air. Almost nonchalantly it heaved its proud silver beauty to the first pale rays of the pastel dawn, sunning the gleaming breast with almost birdlike exposure.

OIL MAN ROBBED OF CASH BELT

Kenneth Sinclair of Washington st., Everett, the manager, was busy in the station when two shabbily dressed men entered.

Fire Hazard Is Cut by 'Safety Cigarette'

Washington, Aug. 16 (AP)—A self-extinguishing cigarette, and a fireproof match now are on the horizon of science.

At the request of representative Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusetts scientists at the bureau of standards, in a six-months test of nine popular brands, have evolved a "safety cigarette," its fire-protection factor lies in an inch-long cork tip, lined with water glass-air-excluding sodium silicate.

Their interest increasing as the work progressed, the scientists also have developed a fireproof match, tipped with wax-rich wax within a half inch of its head.

Tossed aside as a fag-end, the self-extinguishing cigarette was found in tests to go out quickly enough to reduce the fire hazard seventy per cent as compared with the untreated cigarette.

Portland, Me., Aug. 16 (INS)—Company M and the mounted detachment of the 5th U. S. Infantry Regiment began a long hike from Ft. Preble today to Alstead, N. H., where the units will join others of the regular army which are hiking from many points in New England for maneuvers.

DEFENSE RESTS WITH MURRAY DENIALS

Captain Reserves the Right to Call Witness in Rebuttal

Testifying in his own defense to charges of attacking three enlisted men at Camp Devens and being drunk and disorderly, Capt. Samuel E. Murray, commander of the 26th Tank Company, Yankee Division asserted:

That he himself was struck in the back by a man whom he believes to be Sergt. Ernest Butler, a prosecution witness.

That he never saw Privates Leaman, Anderson and Hennessy, three headquarters detachment men, until investigation of the charges were begun, and that he was not drunk.

That he did not enter the building in a corridor of which Leaman swore that Murray and attacked him.

That he did not go near Sweeney's auto, close to which both Anderson and Hennessy testified that Murray had struck them.

The defense rested after Captain Murray completed his testimony. The case will be taken under advisement following argument of counsel of about one hour each. A decision is expected within a few days.

There will be a rebuttal at the next session. Right is reserved by the defense to bring in as a witness an officer who was present when Captain Murray confronted the enlisted men on the morning of July 30.

It was announced that Capt. Leo A. Fuchy of the 26th Division Wagon Company, charged with having falsely certified men in his company for pay, will be tried next Tuesday night at 8, at room 370 in the State House.

LABOR LEADER WOULD LIMIT COURT POWER

A. F. of L. Legislative Agent Scores Latitude of Judges in Contempt Cases

"I believe the present power of judges in contempt of court proceedings, not only in Massachusetts, but also in other states, should be materially curbed by proper legislation," said Martin Joyce, legislative agent of the state branch, American Federation of Labor, in commenting on the case of two Cleveland newspapermen who were sentenced to jail for contempt in connection with the printing of an editorial.

Joyce is one of the most widely known labor leaders in New England. He represents 330,000 organized workers in Massachusetts. He asserts that many superior court judges and police officials in Massachusetts are not aware of the peaceful persuasion act in this state and that policemen frequently deliberately color their testimony in strike cases to obtain convictions.

The labor leader asserted:

"The American Federation of Labor has been on record for years as opposed to the granting of a temporary injunction in any case until both parties are heard. In other words, we have always favored the limitation of judges' power to punishing for contempt to acts committed in their presence. We favor jury trial in all contempt cases as being the eminently fair way of determining matters of this character. The next best thing to a jury trial would be the hearing all facts by a judge before an injunction is issued.

OLD STATUTE DROPPED

"Prior to 1921 in all contempt cases the right of trial by jury existed in Massachusetts but in the recodification of laws in 1921 this right was wiped out. This good law, as well as many others, was wiped off the statute books at that time and labor leaders have since been endeavoring to put it back again.

"Gov. Frank G. Allen devoted a whole paragraph in his inaugural address last January to correct the abuse of injunctions in this state and he made every effort with members of the legislative committee on judiciary to have incorporated in our law that would stop these abuses.

"I believe Gov. Allen was sincere in this effort as he talked with me as legislative agent of the American Federation of Labor, several times and with Senator Joseph J. Bradford Davis of Havarhill, chairman of the committee on judiciary, along this line.

"Senator Davis talked with several superior court judges about the matter, having told me he did so, and eventually he made no recommendation whatever.

"I do not say that there was no need of such legislation and of course we do not agree with their conclusions. It is quite natural that judges do not wish to have their power curbed. In this they are almost as bitterly opposed to labor as well as rulers have seldom willingly given up any of their power.

TO CONTINUE FIGHT

"We will continue our fight in the 1930 Legislature for the enactment of perfecting legislation along these lines. We feel certain Governor Allen will help us in this fight, as we have had no doubt of his sincerity.

"Some of the superior court judges in Massachusetts as well as many police officials are not aware of the fact that we have a peaceful persuasion act in this State. Men and women who are peacefully persuading strike-breakers have been taken into court, found guilty and sentenced by judges for doing the very things this act permits. Several cases of this character are now pending in the courts of this Commonwealth, on appeal.

"In bring about convictions police in this State have testified to alleged overt acts, such as placing a hand upon a strike-breaker, even though these acts did not occur. Strike pickets are always carefully instructed by their officials, acting upon legal advice, just how far they can go, and seldom commit overt acts, realizing that if they do, they will injure the cause they are trying to win, but overzealous police inject imaginary technical assaults into their testimony. As many foreign-born workers talk, not only with their mouths but with their hands, policemen are frequently wrong in the conclusions they draw as to threats or intimidation.

"I believe that the present powers of judges in contempt of court proceedings, not only in this State, but other states, should be materially curbed by proper legislation."

$10,000 GEMS GONE; HOLD 3

Bridgeport, Ct., Aug. 16 (AP)—A Bridgeport man and two Southport men were arrested today by Fairfield police on a technical charge of breach of peace in connection with the disappearance of a bag containing $10,000 worth of jewels in Southport railroad station last Saturday.

The two held are Fred Kraus of Seaview avenue, this city, and Vincent Nagi and Joseph Baghar of Southport.

The jewels are the property of Mrs. D. T. Erwin of Park ave., New York city, who left them in the Southport station while waiting for friends from Greens Farms, with whom she was to spend the week-end.

Constable Eugene Burns of Fairfield, who was working on the case, learned that the jewels had first been in possession of the Southport men and then turned over to Kraus for safekeeping.

Seek Husband of Woman Set on Fire

New York, Aug. 16 (AP)—Mrs. Anna Crofield, 35, of Brooklyn, was near death from burns today and detectives were seeking a mysterious assailant who they believed threw turpentine on her and set fire to it.

The woman was found in the rear yard of her home by neighbors attracted by her screams as she attempted to beat out the fire in her dress with her bare hands. Detectives were seeking George Crofield, the woman's husband, from whom she was estranged.

Hills Grove Site for Airport 'Unsafe'

Providence, Aug. 16—Declaring the site "unsafe and undesirable," the Civic Aviation Conference today urged the State Airport Commission to abandon the Hills Grove airport.

The conference asserted that the cost of preparing the airport for full use would be in excess of the $250,000 available, and that even after all this money was spent the airport would be unsuitable.

Death Threat Sent by Mail to Garrett

GARRETT IS SMILING

If Garrett was at all embarrassed by his presence in the headquarters of the division which he declared was hostile to him, he gave no sign of it. He was at ease and smiling and informed Lieut. McGrath he would be glad to work with him.

"This isn't bad here," he remarked, glancing about the station. "Eighteen or 19 (divisions) would be worse."

"You have some early mail," Lieut. McGrath said, handing him a plain government postcard addressed in blue pencil: "Patrolman Oliver Garrett, Station 3, Joy st., Boston."

The message on the card was scrawled lengthwise, beginning: "Well, Garrett——" There followed numerous disparaging remarks directed at Garrett's character and indicating a place where the writer thought Garrett should have been transferred instead of to Station 3.

THREAT IN MESSAGE

"It is too bad somebody don't bump you off. You will get it yet by the pineapple route. Whether you are on the force or not, you will get yours yet——"

The message was signed "K and K. KKK."

Garrett read it and laughed "Now, isn't that a great greeting?" he asked.

The two days he has been absent from duty since announcement of his transfer were days off owed Garrett and his regular vacation officially starts tonight.

TODAY

Clear Creek, nearby. But gold mining is not what it was. It takes the same amount of gold to get one dollar. Labor and everything used in gold production costs twice what it used to cost. And the dollar you get for your gold is worth only about sixty cents, when you spend it.

But Colorado has found in rich soil, industry and water power, greater wealth than was ever in the gold mines. Sugar beets give the state $23,000,000 every year. It takes a good gold mine to do that.

Three hundred and ninety-seven pounds of water will produce a three pound beet. Likewise it takes 554 pounds of water to produce a pound of dry material in potatoes. And sugar beets are a cash crop. The farmer is guaranteed seven dollars a ton as soon as he dumps the beets near the railroad track. "Dumps" are provided at convenient intervals.

P. S. If you come from the offsite East you will feel a little homesick, when you pass the sign post near Buffalo Bill's grave. It reads, "1304 miles to New York."

Autoist Crashes as He Sleeps at Wheel

Worcester, Aug. 16—William J. Madden, Jr., 27, of Waltham was seriously injured today when he fell asleep at the wheel of his automobile between Northboro and Shrewsbury, the machine crashing into a tree.

Madden was taken to Worcester City Hospital, where his name was placed on the danger list. He suffered from head injuries, possible fracture of the skull, a fractured nose and a broken jaw. The accident occurred on the Boston Post road.

Chicago, Aug. 16 (INS)—Shooting up a soft drink parlor to "get even" with hubitues who, he said, always "kidded" him, John Hasek, 42, today probably mortally wounded two men and then walked to a police station to surrender.

Similar bequests of $300,000 each are made to Mrs. Minnie W. Crespin of Worcester and Mrs. Josephine W. Hamilton of Caledonia, N. Y., sisters.

BROKERS LOANS SPUR SENATOR TO ACTION

Washington, Aug. 16 (AP)—The upward trend during the summer of loans to brokers by Federal Reserve member banks promised to lead to some sort of Congressional inquiry into the credit situation this fall.

Senator Fletcher of Florida, the ranking Democrat on the Senate banking committee, today declared in favor of a survey of federal credit conditions by the committee along the lines proposed in the pending resolution of Senator King, Democrat, Utah.

The King resolution, proposing a broad inquiry into stock market transactions and into the credit situation, is now before the committee, which has held the view that the Federal Reserve Board already has power to curb loans for speculative purposes. The Florida Senator shares with Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, and Chairman Norbeck, the opinion that the board by stringent policies can check excessive use of federal funds by stock market speculators. He believes, however, that the situation warrants a Senate inquiry for the purpose of surveying conditions generally.

He approves the recent decision of the Reserve Board sanctioning the raise in the rediscount rate of the New York Federal Reserve Bank to 6 per cent.

G. O. P. Women Hear British Election Talk

The Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts is holding a "current events luncheon" at the clubhouse today in honor of Mrs. A. J. George, a member and current events lecturer. Mrs. George has recently returned from a six weeks' sojourn in England, where she was able to observe the methods of an English election. She will speak on the subject "The Recent General Election in England."

Easy Cash Every Day; Look for Yours

By WON LUCKY BUCK

Three more of the folks who are watching the serial numbers of those lucky bucks have cashed in. My great money game is working to perfection. Every day I'm passing out real cash. Everyone is invited to step right up and collect a share of the $150 which I'm offering daily for old $1 bills.

Another list of 16 winners is published in another column, bringing the grand total of the value of lucky bucks to $850.

This money game is a cinch. All you have to do is to bring me one of those $1 bills with the serial number corresponding with the numbers published in the Boston American and I'll pay off quick. But remember I pay dividends on lucky bucks only within one week from the date of the first publication of the serial number in the Boston Evening American.

Even little Miss Frances Gray nine, of Lancaster st., Quincy, knows how to play my money game. Her mother sent her to a nearby store and she came back home with lucky buck V32768235D, a winner for $5. But it was Frances who discovered the identity of the lucky one-spot and therefore Frances gets the $4 profit.

J. Paul Canty, Jr., Center st., West Roxbury, checked a parcel at the baggage check room in South Station. He paid his bill with a $2 bill and received lucky buck A18319671E in change. It's another winner for $5.

Lillian Boyd, Rice ave., Revere, didn't know where she got lucky buck Z99243737D but she found it in her possession when she checked her old $1 bills with the serial numbers in the Boston Evening American. I paid her $10 for it.

Now folks, these lucky bucks listed in the Boston Evening American every day are in circulation and you're liable to find one of them wherever the American is read. So keep a sharp watch for them.

ROBBED WHILE PRAYING

New York, Aug. 16—While she was kneeling in prayer in St. Patrick's Cathedral, on Fifth ave., Miss Amparo Rodriguez, a socially prominent Filipino maid, whose father is a senator in the Philippines, was robbed of her letter of credit and passport.

Pickpockets are the scourge of Manila, Miss Rodriguez related, but she relaxed her vigilance when she came to this country on a world tour because she had heard that police here had sneak thieves practically eradicated.

Lily Dulany Cushing to Wed George C. Clark, Jr., at Newport

THE SOCIAL SPOTLIGHT turns on Newport tomorrow when the wedding of Miss Lily Dulany Cushing and George Crawford Clark, Jr., is to be solemnized in Trinity Church, with much pomp and circumstance. The Rev. Stanley Hughes, rector, will be assisted by the Rev. Sherrard Billings of Groton as officiating clergyman. Miss Cushing is the daughter of the late Howard Cushing and niece of Grafton Dulany Cushing of Boston. Mrs. James Denison Sawyer, mother of the bride-elect, is entertaining the bridal party with a dinner this evening at The Ledges, the Sawyer Newport estate.

MISS ELIZABETH BLISS OF Westbury, L. I., will serve as honor maid at the Cushing-Clark nuptials and the other attendants include Miss Caroline Clark, Miss Anne Carley, Mrs. E. N. Potter, Jr., and Mrs. Arthur Richardson, all of New York. Mr. Clark, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Crawford Clark of New York and Dark Harbor, Me., will have Lancing Pruyn of New York as his best man. Two Boston men, John Parkinson and Charles M. Norton, will serve on the usher squad which also includes Norton Eustis of Washington, D. C., George Tiffany of St. Louis, Arthur McGeogh, Jr., and Cauliand Barnes of New York. A large reception will follow at the Sawyer villa and the honeymoon is to be spent in Europe. Just a week after this wedding an equally imposing ceremony will unite Miss Caroline Clark, the daughter of the George Crawford Clarks, and Arthur Nye McGeogh, Jr., at Dark Harbor.

THREE OTHER IMPORTANT events make Newport interesting to a large contingent of society tomorrow. The King's Cup races have already called several of the yachting set to that port for the week-end, among them the Horace Binneys on their yacht, The Queen Mab. The Astor, palatial yacht of Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Burrage, will probably join others Newport-bound today for these races. The Newport Horse Show has its final events tomorrow also—a magnet for the horse loving set. And then in the evening comes the brilliant debut of Miss Kitty Wickes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forsyth Wickes of New York, at the Clambake Club. Miss Wickes was recently a guest at Edgewater Farm, the Beverly Cove home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter, who will attend her coming out ball.

ANOTHER IMPORTANT SOCIETY wedding is to be that of Miss Emily Coolidge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Jefferson Coolidge, to Lieut. Harry A. Woodruff, U. S. A., invitations for which will soon be out for an early fall ceremonial in Boston. Miss Coolidge is with her parents at their summer place at Squam Lake, N. H. Her fiance has recently returned from Paris, where he visited his mother and stepfather, Dr. and Mrs. Jacques Calve.

THE WEDDING OF MISS BETTIE MYRICK GIBBS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Gibbs of West Roxbury and Yarmouthport, and Harold T. Hungerford of St. Louis will be solemnized tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 in the First Universalist Church of Yarmouthport. This is to be an important ceremony for the Cape Cod summer colony, where the bride is well known. Several guests have come on from St. Louis for the event, including Mrs. Alice Hungerford, mother of the bridegroom. Miss Gibbs has just returned from a two months' trip to Paris, where she renewed friendships made during her former days as a student there.

AMONG THE SUMMER colony who often drop in at the Ritz-Carlton for luncheon these days while in town shopping, Mrs. Curtis Guild of Nahant is always a gracious figure. She usually has a guest at her table and yesterday was seen dining with her brother-in-law, Vittorio Orlandini of Beacon st. Her niece, Miss Laetitia Orlandini, who recently returned from studies abroad, is visiting with her mother in Bar Harbor this week.

ALMOST EVERY NORTH SHORE family is keeping open house this week for visitors from far and near. Mrs. William De Ford Beal has her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Morris Starr of New York and Ridgefield, Ct., at her Beverly Farms home. John D. Williams of the Newhall Apartments, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Morrill at their Manchester place, and Mr. and Mrs. Harvey P. Hood, 2d, are at Cherry Hill Farm, Beverly, for the remainder of the month. Mrs. John Lavalle of Marlborough st. and Nahant is spending the week-end with her son, John Lavalle, and Mrs. Lavalle at their Gloucester home.

Miss Agnes Boardman not only cut covers for the tea tables but she later assisted in serving the patrons of St. John's Church fair at Beverly Farms. North Shore society was well represented both as workers and as patrons at this annual event. (Staff photo.)

Mississippi Party on Their Way Home

SENATE DUTY 'SLAVE'S LIFE'

Portland, Me., Aug 16—Lawrence C. Dame, of the Evening Express, says:

"Senator Arthur R. Gould of Maine, who confounded the drys a few weeks ago by his endorsement of a product for making synthetic wine, does not intend to be a candidate to succeed himself. When he concludes his present term two years hence, he will have quite enough of the 'slave's life' which he claims is that of a United States senator.

"Only one fact could possibly persuade him to attempt another 6 years of service in the Senate. That would be the necessity of balking the nomination of Ralph O. Brewster (former governor), who apparently is one of Mr. Gould's bitter political enemies."

Masons Welcome British Brothers

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 16—The New Hampshire Grand Lodge of Masons held a special meeting in St. John's Masonic Temple in honor of between 20 and 30 members of the fraternity of the Engish cruiser H. M. S. Capetown, now in port.

PANTAGES WILL CALL SEVERAL WITNESSES

Los Angeles, Cal. Aug. 16—Attorneys for Alexander Pantages, 54-year-old theatrical magnate, who is accussed of attacking a 17-year-old dancer by force and violence, announced that they would summon witnesses during his preliminary hearing now under way here. Their previous plan merely to question State's witnesses was abandoned.

A stipulation made by the defense for the appointment by three physicians to examine the girl, Lucice Pringle, was agreed to by the prosecution. The doctors will be selected, one each by the court, prosecution and defence.

Miss Pringle collapsed a third time since the beginning of the hearing when defence attorneys resumed their cross-examination this afternoon and took the witness over details of the alleged attack.

"It was awful—awful," the girl cried and pitched forward, nearly falling from the witness stand as she fainted.

After she was revived, the witness identified garments introduced as those she had worn the day of the attack, and then at the request of defence attorneys, she re-enacted parts of the alleged struggle with Pantages.

Inter-Racial Unity Aim of Club Women

"Inter-racial Unity in America" is to be the new name of that department of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs which has been devoted to the Americanization of newcomers to this country.

Under the chairmanship of Mrs. Charles H. Danforth of Jamaica Plain, the department will be so broad in scope as to completely surround the problem. Americanization of foreigners is the goal toward which Bay State clubwomen will direct their efforts.

It is a goal which will lead to a more cohesive and co-operative nation, according to Mrs. Danforth, who formulated a new and enlarged program.

Circulars explaining the increased work of the newly-named department will be sent throughout the State, and after the Watch Hill, Rhode Island, conference September 4, 5, 6, the clubs will resume activities and make plans to follow Mrs. Danforth's outlines.

"The new name represents a goal, an ideal, something towards which we must strive if the "American" of the future is to be a member of a cohesive co-operative nation," Mrs. Danforth explained. "It must be a process of education, of enlightenment. We must become intelligent about this subject of race and nationality and we must use our intelligence to offset the mass of misinformation and prejudice, scattered by pseudo-patriots."

All last year Mrs. Danforth stressed the need for further adjustment of aliens to American conditions, but stressed even further the greater need for Americans to re-adjust themselves to conditions as established by the newcomers and be intelligent in understanding such conditions.

"President Hoover has said, 'Here in America we are building a new race.' This is a thought that is new to many people," Mrs. Danforth continued. "It is difficult for many to grasp. There is hardly a nation today that is not compounded of many races. But a process like this is so much easier to see in retrospect. There are so many people who are still possessed of the idea that our nationality is Anglo-Saxon, or at least "Nordic," and who still believe in the myth that certain races are superior, others inferior.

"It is time for us all to realize that the much-talked of 'adjustment of our newcomers to their life in America is not the only adjustment that is necessary.

JUDGE MORTON MENTIONED FOR VACANCY

Judge James M. Morton, senior member of the United States District Court bench here, is being mentioned as a successor of United States Circuit Judge Charles H. Johnson, who resigned several months ago.

A Washington rumor indicated that a choice may be made by President Hoover within a short time.

Judge Johnson's home is in Waterville, Me., and in some quarters, the belief prevails that the appointment should go to a Maine man. The other circuit judges are George H. Bingham of New Hampshire and George W Anderson of this city. It is understood here that Judge John A. Peters, present district judge in Maine, does not care for the place.

If Judge Morton should be named and accept, this would mean the appointment of someone to take his place. In this connection, Frederick H. Tarr, United States attorney for Massachusetts, has been repeatedly the subject of gossip. Tarr's closest friends, however, do not believe he would take a place on the bench undir any consideration.

QUINCY WOMAN BRAVED WILDS OF SIBERIA

The vast steppes of Siberia, land of mystery and adventure to the passengers of the Graf Zeppelin, are nearly as familiar as the State of Massachusetts to a former resident of Quincy.

She is Miss Helen Calista Wilson, graduate of Radcliffe College, class of 1899, and daughter of the Rev. Daniel Munroe Wilson, former pastor of the First Church (Unitarian) of Quincy. Miss Wilson recently returned to her Greenwich Village studio in New York from four years in "the Russias," two of them having been passed in Siberia.

"There are innumerable striking similarities between modern Siberia and the pioneer America of the 'Covered Wagon' and 'Iron Horse' period," said Miss Wilson in a recent interview.

"Under the old Czarist regime Siberia was settled largely by criminals and exiled aristocrats. Today it is being filled up little by little by Russian peasants who have found their home allotments too small for them. They make the long trek over the Urals in picturesque versions of the Forty-Niners' covered wagons."

Miss Wilson, who has served as court-martialed stenographer in the Philippines, went to a settlement connected with an experimental industrial development in the Kuzbas Basin on the River Tom, Siberia, in a secretarial capacity in 1924. During her two years of service there she and a close friend, Dr. Elsie Reed Mitchell, took many week-end camping hikes into the country about them, and at the expiration of their contract, spent an entire summer hitch-hiking in Central Siberia.

Fall River Man Held in Lisbon

Fall River, Aug. 16—For the second time within a few days, plans have been made to bring back to the United States of a prisoner held on foreign shores for Bristol County authorities, John Macedo, who lived in Pearl st., until a few weeks ago, and then skipped the country with $3000 leaving his wife and four children here, is now held at Lisbon, Portugal, for the Fall River police.

In the other case, State Detective Francis W. Clemmy of Taunton sails to bring back Victor Lustig, in connection with the $20,000 Kearns robbery case in Raynham.

BELIEVE CHILD LABOR 'FRAUD' IS ENDED

Providence, Aug. 16—With the arrest and conviction of former Secretary Bertram W. Wall of the Bristol School Committee, who pleaded nolo to charges of issuing false age certificates to minor children to enable them to obtain work in the mills, State officials believe that the child labor situation in Rhode Island has been cleared up. Wall was fined $100 and costs.

Investigators from the State labor department are still checking up the ages of youthful workers in industrial establishments in Barrington, West Barrington and Warren, but no evidence of fraud has been unearthed in those places up to the present time.

It is believed that the warning issued by Atty.-Gen. Oscar Heltzen in court, during the arraignment of the former Bristol school official, will have a salutary effect throughout Rhode Island. In his presentment of the case, Heltzen said:

"In their wisdom the members of the Legislature have prohibited exploitation of little children in industry. Over and over again, by amendments to the original law, they have tried to safeguard child health and child welfare.

"They have defined as definitely as humanly possible just what all having to do with such employment shall be required to observe for the protection of those too young to protect themselves. Along with the natural guardians of children, school department officials above all should have the best interests of children before them at all times.

"The defendant is a school official. He has violated his high office of secretary of the school department of Bristol."

The scandal has tightened up the employment situation in the mill centers, where every applicant under 21 is being put through a searching examination to prove his or her legal age.

Find Baby's Body in Baggage Room

Hartford, Ct., Aug. 16—The body of an infant, apparently strangled at birth, was found in a suitcase checked in the baggage room of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad station here. The medical examiner said strangulation had occurred a week ago. The identity of the person who checked the bag is not known.

OLD L. A. W. FIRM FACES BREAK

Worcester, Aug. 16—Lack of a quorum caused postponement until August 28 of heated arguments and discussions by attorneys and officers of the Superior Credit Corporation, formerly the United L. A. W. Acceptance Corporation) after a five-hour meeting. The organization was in the limelight when the affairs of Arthur K. Resing were given an airing.

The action under consideration is a petition, filed in the superior court here by the minority group asking that a receiver be appointed. The special meeting in the Bancroft Hotel to decide on the future of the corporation was adjourned.

The minority group in the petition allege misappropriation of funds amounting to more than $1,000,000. That the session was divided into two separate camps or groups was evident.

One group of stockholders is for accepting the recommendations of the new controlling group of the Superior Credit Corporation, which is headed by H. H. Gunder, prominent financial man, that the assets amounting to more than half a million dollars be sold by exchange of securities to the Atlas Financial Corporation, which is a Gunder interest. The other group is in favor of immediate liquidation or a receivership.

Suicide Warns Others of Gas Menace

Leaving a note under his door, warning other residents in the house not to light any matches until the gas had been turned off in his room, Reinert Svenson, 64, a widower, who has been living with Mr. and Mrs. George W. Holst, on King st., Dorchester, committed suicide by inhaling illuminating gas.

His body was found by Mrs. Holst after she had found the note under Svenson's door. He had placed the end of a gas tube in his mouth and had placed his head in a large paper bag.

The note read, "Do not light the gas. Tell your husband to shut off the gas in my room."

According to Mrs. Holst, Svenson has been despondent for some time, owing to ill health.

Pupil Is Suicide

New York, Aug. 16—The body of a 12-year-old Brooklyn schoolboy, who has been studying night and day in efforts to skip a grade and enter his school in the fall, was found hanging from a candelier in his home today.

SEEK SEVEN IN AGENT'S DEATH

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 16—Seven persons are being sought by federal officials in their quest for the slayer of Paul E. Reynolds, United States Department of Justice agent. The names of the suspects were withheld and no details of the search were revealed.

Henry Roton, a ranch worker, told authorities that he saw occupants of two automobiles engage in an excited conversation and place a large package in one of the cars a week ago tonight. Reynolds, whose body, with a bullet wound in the heart, was found in an irrigation canal, disappeared Friday.

Worst Carbuncle; It Starts Run on Bank

New York, Aug. 16—A carbuncle on the back of the president's neck indirectly helped to start a run on the Bay Ridge Savings Bank in Brooklyn.

Two thousand depositors rushed into the place, and before they had quieted down—and before some of them, rather sheepishly, had gone back and reopened their accounts—they had drawn out $2,000,000.

Several days ago Dr. Maurice T. Lewis, president, went to a hospital in Connecticut to have a carbuncle removed from the back of his neck.

False rumors were circulated that he was dead and that his death had caused a run on the bank. Rumors of a run started the actual run.

The heads of the bank heard about the rumors. To head it off they summoned Dr. Lewis back by wire and appealed to Joseph A. Broderick, State superintendent of banks.

Saved in Dive From Station Window

Attleboro, Aug. 16—Albert W. Stoddard, 24, a private of Troop B, Third Cavalry, Ft. Ethan Allen, Vt., and residing at 1235 Park st., here, attempted to dive from a second-story window at local police headquarters after he had been seized as a deserter by Lieut. Frank McKay.

Stoddard was saved from purging head first, 20 feet to the cement sidewalk, when he was grabbed by the slack of his trousers by Patrolman Joseph O'Donnell as his feet caught on a window sill.

FARM BOARD TO CURB HEARINGS IN FUTURE

Washington, Aug. 16—The Federal Farm Board announced that henceforth for an undetermined period it intends to devote itself exclusively to the perfection of its own operating machinery.

To this end, the board will decline to grant hearings to applicants for loans unless emergency in character, and all delegations have been asked not to come to Washington except by previously arranged appointments.

Since the day of its organization, the board has held almost continuous sessions with co-operative officials representing the various crops.

So far, the board has made one loan, an advance of $300,000 to two Florida co-operatives to aid in meeting government regulations imposed by the prevalence of the Mediterranean fruit fly.

There had been some question as to whether the board had authority to make loans until its members were confirmed by the Senate, but Comptroller-General McCarl ruled that it was legal to do so.

TO THE MOTORISTS
and New York:

Subject: The TRUTH About Gasoline

The success of our business has been built up on the principle of furnishing extra quality without extra price. We have constantly improved the quality of COLONIAL GASOLINE at an extra refining cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars - the increased sales created by the improved quality off-setting the additional cost. So that today, with the elimination of "borderland" (the "kerosene mixture" found in ordinary gasoline), we are supplying in COLONIAL GASOLINE a motor fuel whose performance - in at least 80% of the cars in use today - cannot be surpassed by any gasoline on the market, including those which are sold at a premium.

This COLONIAL superiority is the direct result of our unusual refining process - which removes every trace of the "borderland mixture" that lies between gasoline and kerosene. We sell this "borderland" as a by-product - never as gasoline; which makes COLONIAL superior in quality and more expensive to produce. Yet COLONIAL GASOLINE sells at no premium price.

However, there are some cars in use today which are peculiarly sensitive to knocking, and which may require a special fuel that will eliminate this knock. These are new cars of unusually high compression, or old cars in which carbon deposits have raised compression abnormally - but probably there are not over 20% of the cars today which are in this class. Even in such cars, COLONIAL GASOLINE gives remarkable performance - reducing the knock and increasing power and pick-up. But for best results and to entirely eliminate knocking, we recommend for these cars our COLONIAL ETHYL GASOLINE. This is made from a base of COLONIAL GASOLINE, and therefore in itself is a very high powered, high test motor fuel - but in addition, on account of the peculiar properties of Ethyl fluid which is added to the COLONIAL GASOLINE base, all fuel knocking is entirely eradicated. We were the first in New England to refine and market an Ethyl Gasoline, and COLONIAL ETHYL is today one of the most widely sold premium gasolines in New England and New York.

It is very easy for you to determine for yourself whether your car is in the 20% class by trying it on our COLONIAL ETHYL GASOLINE - and if you find the performance of your car is improved by the use of COLONIAL ETHYL, it will be well worth the difference in price. If, however, you find that you do not need COLONIAL ETHYL - then your car is in the 80% class, and will give its best performance with straight COLONIAL GASOLINE.

Very truly yours,

E. N. Wrightington

Vice-President.

YOU CAN FIND BROADWAY IN MAINE

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

(When Mr. Young started on his vacation, his aide asked him to cover the news along the way as the Dramatic Editor wandered through New England and Canada. The following is the first of a series of articles telling what the D. E. is seeing and hearing in the great open spaces. —Note.)

SKOWHEGAN, Aug. 16—Broadway in the heart of Maine! Well, there's a little trick to that. Some very nice people from that region in Manhattan bounded by Forty-second st. and Times sq. really do manage to kill time and make good drama in a place called Lakewood, somewhat off the main line of the Maine Central's quivering service, but near enough the modest trading town of Skowhegan to assure a decent supply o city vegetables, authoritative milk, lime juice and other important accessories to an actor bent upon a virtuous vacation.

THEY really do make good drama at Lakewood. As values are computed in the metropolitan ratio it's a fancy bargain. For more than 20 years—and a few more—I have been on both sides the line where the real drama of the nation is exhibited. During that period there have been interesting developments—and always on an upward scale in prices. One of the real joys of an optimistic youth was to see Arthur Byron playing with Maude Adams in "The Little Minister" at the good old Hollis at a top price of $1.50. That was when the theater started to swell into larger dimensions. Miss Adams has passed out of the yearly panorama of theatrical achievement. But Mr. Byron has moved progressively until, if you care to take chance with his arts in a Broadway play, the box office assessment will be at least three dollars—perhaps four.

THIS is mentioned for no other reason than that Arthur Byron probably represents the last of the old school of acting which turned out actors instead of performers, not mummers who read an author's lines, made a gesture or two and let it go at that. Mr. Byron, on his own account, contributes one of the important units in the broadly advertised notion that "Broadway reposes at Lakewood."

He does exactly that, but his days are numbered. New York is calling—has called and is insistent.

IN another month—or less—this excellent actor, whom I still insist is the most intelligent and most talented of the present day crop, will be sweating on Broadway for William Harris, Jr. A new play will take Mr. Byron's attention, and when you gaze upon it from soft chairs later in the season the cost will be at least three dollars—perhaps four. We merely repeat the prevailing prices.

It is different at Lakewood. A dollar for good seats and ten cents for peanuts is sufficient. That is what is meant by "Broadway in the heart of Maine."

OF course, Mr. Byron is not a weekly feature at Lakewood, although Mrs. Byron (Katherine Kaye) and Kate Byron, a lovely lass with loads of talent, find their way regularly to Lakewood's inviting stage. William Courtleigh also was caught acting in this rural play house—and, believe it or not, in a minor role. "Faith, Hope and Alice," a pleasantly comedy, by David Wallace, utilized much of the loose talent on the lake shore. None of the heroics were missing, for Walter Gilbert, masculine wooer in more plays than we can remember, was simply himself again.

Nicholas Young

THERE is a great gap between the presentations at Lakewood and those including the same actor-folk when you can really catch 'em on Seventh-ave. Here, at least, you find bad plays well acted.

A Timely Delivery

HAROLD HIGHTOWER AND RICHARD ARLEN

Richard Arlen seems to be in a predicament and also in a fair way to get out of it. It is a scene from "The Four Feathers," stirring tale of the African jungle, now showing at the Uptown and Washington st. Olympia.

MEXICO WILL PRODUCE NATIVE LORE FILMS

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal

Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 16—Mexico, having within the last few years contributed a number of stars to the screen, is about to do a little motion picture producing on its own. David Kirkland, who directed some of Fred Thompson's Western thrillers, is in Mexico organizing his own picture company and, of course, with Mexican capital. The latter is a needless explanation, I should say.

Louella O. Parsons

I have a sneaking idea that Mr. Kirkland will offer some propaganda for our sister country. Mexico has rebelled so bitterly against the showing of Mexico in an uncomplimentary light, that here is her golden chance to present what she considers a real picture of Mexican life.

Don Alvarado will leave for Mexico City to play the lead in the first production, which deals with Mexican youth.

ONLY a few months ago all of the leading women in the movies craved a chance to play in a John Barrymore picture. Oh! To have the great Barrymore as teacher in the fine art of emoting was the goal that all our good-looking young women of the screen sought. Didn't Mr. Barrymore's own romance start after Dolores Costello played opposite him on the screen, and didn't she almost rapidly into fame as a star after he discovered her? I don't know whether the competition is keen now, but still it is pleasant for any young woman to have the Barrymore prestige. At least, Loretta Young is delighted that she has been chosen by the Warners for Mr. Barrymore's leading woman in "The Man," his next picture.

IT is always good news to hear that any actor finds himself after a bitter struggle. James Murray at one time was hailed as one of the most promising young leading men. James made a few mistakes and there were many months when he was out of work. John Robertson gave him the role in "The Shanghai Lady" that Charles Bickford was to have had, and after looking at the "rushes," Carl Laemmle, Jr., was so pleased with Murray's work that he gave him a long contract. Young Murray, whatever his faults may have been, has probably had his lesson. Anyway, here's hoping that he will continue along the right path. Sounds like an Aimee McPherson lecture, and honestly I don't mean it that way. It's too hot to preach.

THIS seems to be the open season for borrowing talent in the movies. The companies are certainly more polite to each other than they used to be in the matter of renting out stars. I can remember when it was almost impossible for one studio to let another studio have any of its favorite stars. But came the struggle with Equity, and now the producers are sticking shoulder to shoulder, fighting together for a common cause. Pathe, for instance, had "The Grand Parade," a story by Hoxie and Emmet Rogers. They wanted a woman with stage experience. Result, Winifred Sheehan loaned Helen Twelvetrees, who has been brought here from New York by the Fox company. She is to play the principal role, with Fred Newmeyer Harold Lloyd's former director, directing.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Patsy Ruth Miller buying a green hat for her trousseau and trying hard not to wear it before her wedding day. Helen Ferguson entertaining out-of-town guests at "The Jade God" in which she is playing. Kathryn Crawford and Wesley Ruggles dropping in at Henry's Kitchen now, but still it is pleasant for any young woman to have the Barrymore prestige. At least, Loretta Young is delighted that she has been chosen by the Warners for Mr. Barrymore's leading woman in "The Man," his next picture.

Close-Ups of Film Folk

LOIS MORAN, who is co-featured with Nick Stuart in William Fox's latest sound presentation, "Joy Street," which is to make its first Boston showing at the Scollay tomorrow, is a native of Pittsburgh, where her father was a prominent physician. Most of her education was in Paris, where she studied dancing, and appeared in the Paris opera Samuel Goldwyn, in Paris on the eve of his production of "Stella Dallas" decided that Lois Moran was ideal to play the role of the daughter. This opinion was enhanced when he saw her in some film playing a small role in a French production.

Lois Moran

Carroll Nye

CARROLL NYE, one of the most popular juvenile leads in the business, plays a feature role in "Light Fingers," the Columbia all-talking production coming to the Modern and Beacon. Immediately after his graduation from the University of California, he began reporting on the Los Angeles Times. At night he could be found in the cast of "White Collars." His screen career began in 1925 when he appeared in "Classified." Since then he has played 35 featured roles including "Her Honor the Governor," "Kosher Kitty Kelly," "Chain's Wife," "While the City Sleeps," and in "Gold Braid" with Ramon Navarro.

MAUGHAM'S COMEDY IS MET HIT

Photoplay ... "Charming Sinners"
Type ..... Comedy Drama
Star ..... Ruth Chatterton
Theater ..... Metropolitan

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

SOME folks are born in society; some achieve the social register, and some—though for the moment we can't think of a one that comes into this category save Col. Lindbergh and Gene Tunney—have society thrust upon them. "Crashing the gates" socially isn't so easy as the climbers believe; but you can get a good filling of the screen version of the more or less synthetic reality in "Charming Sinners," now at the Metropolitan. Filled as W. Somerset Maugham's delightful marital comedy, it gives a mighty fine picture of "smart life," entertaining and well-acted by an unusually good cast. The dialogue is good and goes across nicely; and the director, Robert Milton, has made the most of the material in hand. The women particularly will like it, not only for its "meat" of gay doings in high life, but for the truly knockout gowns worn by at least four of the ladies in the roster.

NONE other than the joyous Ruth Chatterton has the role of the wise wife who wearies of the pleasure merry-go-rounding of her husband (Clive Brook). Madame decides to give him a taste of his own medicine, but she decides to make the pretense. As luck and the playwright will have it, an oldtime sweetheart of Madam's happens in as Johnny-on-the-spot, and she uses him in her effort to teach hubby a lesson. She forces a confession of misdeeds from hubby, and saves his hide by lying graciously for him.

THEN the clever wife seizes opportunity to drive home her lesson. She plans an elopement and tells the husband all about it. Her oldtime sweetheart is in a paradise of joy, but in and behold! by that old maxim that you can never tell when a woman's will is really willing, he is given the disappointment of his life by getting the coldest frigid air at that. Off on a vacation, trip goes the wife, alone.

NOTHING heavy about all this; just fluff, and honest-to-goodness meringue on society's lemon pie. But it is thoroughly pleasant to see and hear, the mimes are excellent in portrayal of their various parts, and the whole makes tiptop entertainment.

* * *

MISS CHATTERTON, Mr. Brook, William Powell, Mary Nolan and Laura Hope Crews do their bits wondrously well. Minor characters are also well taken.

* * *

ON stage, there is the exquisite presentation, "Royal Sweets," musical comedy idea based upon "Graustark." It is superb.

Title Changed

Owing to a conflict in titles the forthcoming First National picture heretofore known as "The Queen of Jazz" will be called "The Jazz Queen." It will be the second of the Dorothy Mackaill starring pictures for the new season.

Film Completed

"Nice People"

Constance Bennett's first for Pathe will be "Nice People" to be directed by Edward Griffith. It is an adaption by A. A. Kline of Jan Gelzer's story.

BURLESQUE IS READY FOR SEASON

By MAX MICHAELS

THE forty-nine companies comprising the Mutual Burlesque Circuit have finished rehearsals. A hall was rented for each at a average daily cost of $18, or $108 for six days, totaling $5,292 a week for 49 shows, and $21,168 for the four weeks of rehearsals.

Max Michaels

Other costs of preparation for the coming season include an average of $500 for each company for the "number" producer, which means the man that teaches the chorus girls the dances and "business" of the musical numbers.

For the stage director who produces the "book" and perfects the entire performance there was a further outlay of an average of $600 for each company, these two items totaling $53,900. Then there was the pianist for each show at $10 a day, which figured for the entire four weeks, amounts to $11,760. Moreover, there were the necessary dress rehearsals for each company on the stage immediately preceding the opening performance, and in which the stage hands and electricians were employed.

This frequently amounted to $400, or more, in each case, bringing the cost of getting these shows ready for the rise of the curtain on the first performance to approximately $107,000.

The Mutual Burlesque season will open soon, and 1960 men and women, constituting the entire membership of the 49 companies, will be at their designated "spokes" on the Mutual "wheel." Each spoke represents a city, extending from Boston to Omaha and from Montreal to Louisville.

GOSSIP ALONG NEW YORK'S RIALTO

WHEN William Gillette decides to come out of his retirement and gird himself for the defense of the drama, the event is of such far-reaching importance as to upset even the vaunted tranquility of the Actors' Equity Association. And he has done just that now, although with results satisfactory to all concerned.

It seems that A. L. Erlanger and George C. Tyler have induced Mr. Gillette to make just one more farewell tour undo, their sponsorship this season. The star's consent was achieved only after a year of coaxing, and even then Gillette conjured up what he considered an insurmountable difficulty. He said:

"But can I play? I am not a member of Equity, nor Fidelity, either. When those associations were organized I had too many friends among the managers, as well as among the actors, that I did not wish to ally myself with either side. My feelings still are the same."

When George Tyler starts out to do a thing, however, he is not easily turned aside. He told Gillette he'd see about the matter, and straightway took his troubles to Paul Dullzell, secretary of Equity. Paul was sympathetic and passed the case on to the Equity council. That body's approval, by unanimous vote, was recorded "in view of Mr. Gillette's long and distinguished service in the American theater."

Thus, for the first time in the history of Equity any and all rules which might interfere with an actor's appearance on the stage have been suspended in a graceful tribute to William Gillette.

Gillette's vehicle will be his most notable success, "Sherlock Holmes." It is listed to open on November 18 in Baltimore and a formidable supporting cast is to be recruited for the venture.

* * *

Our old friend, A. H. Woods, is making his first presentation of the season on the night of September 9. The production will be Sammy Shipman and Johnny Hymer's drama, "Scarlet Pages"—heretofore known to Tophat early birds as "A Woman of the Bar" (of justice, presumably!)—and the Morosco Theater will house it. To make this possible, the Shuberts obligingly enough are moving "Gay Paree" that same evening to the Barrymore Theater.

The cast of "Scarlet Pages," as if you didn't know, numbers Elsie Ferguson, Clare Luce and Lee Baker among its personnel.

Meanwhile, Mr. Woods leaped blithely up to Greenwich to join the cheering at the tryout of another of his works, "The Third Day." This is from the pen of John Van Druten, the young English schoolmaster, who surprised his fellow countrymen by their dashing off "Young Woodley," and buying a new thumb rule with its proceeds.

NEVER AGAIN, SAYS ETHEL OF FILMS

ETHEL BARRYMORE, playing G. Martinez Sierra's "The Kingdom of God" and Lili Hatvany's "The Love Duel," in Los Angeles, has been saying some things about the motion picture industry. She recalled the year she spent before the camera in the days before the screen awoke to "the natural noises," as one fair lady of the Los Angeles press described the voice of the film. The actress spoke of Margaret Deland's "The Awakening of Helena Ritchie," one of the pictures she made.

"I have mercifully forgotten all the rest. They were too terrible to remember. I am almost without my audience. Money! What does that mean? I don't know about my brother, John, or what he does with his movie money, but, as for Lionel and myself, it does not matter how much we earn. It all goes. We spend every cent, and gracious knows where it disappears. I left the convent at 13 and went to work on the stage with my grandmother, Mrs. John Drew, so that I might eat. And that is what I have been trying to do ever since.

"I think my brother Lionel is the greatest actor in the world and he has developed into a great film director."

Miss Barrymore is not going to act for the screen again.

3-DAY AIR MEET AT WHITE MTS. PLANNED

By GEORGE W. HAMBLIN

Last year there were so many meets on the book that the fliers couldn't make them all, but this year it is different. We have had a dearth of meets. The last was the Ashnew English affair at Martha's Vineyard which was spoiled by rain. The next one which shapes up to be an exhaustive affair is promised for the White Mountain Air Tournament, at Fabyan, N. H., on August 23, 24 and 25. It is sponsored by the White Mountain Airlines, operators of the Boston-White Mountain air route.

The meet in Whitefield is sure to have unusual acceptance right from the start, and although the field is about 150 miles from Boston, ten pairs of the Boston fliers are going to make the trip.

The meet is under the direct supervision of Hiram Cornell, operations manager for the White Mountain Airlines. Cornell says that the planes of the White Mountain Airlines will make an extra trip on Friday and Saturday of the meet, if the passenger list warrants it. That means that Bostonians can fly up to the meet and enjoy three days of tip-top flying by more than 20 planes, including a fleet of army ships. Army, National Guard and navy fliers are booked to attend and when the whole gang of them descend upon the peaceful countryside at the base of Mt. Washington the air is sure to be stirred up.

Dick Engel took us flying in his little plane, the "Little Chief," the one he designed and built last winter. We buzzed around for about 20 minutes and had a lot of fun. Afterward Dick took Robert Gillis, Jr., son of the managing editor of the Boston Evening American, up for a ride.

Walter G. Davis of North Falmouth, reported to Robert L. O'Brien, the Supervisor of Aviation for a license of his Davis monoplane. O'Brien flew the ship and says it performs very well. He sends a letter to the youthful pilot owner.

Government Station to Rid Air of Howls

Washington, Aug. 16 — Formal announcement that the constant frequency radio station authorized by Congress last winter will be erected at Grand Island, Nebraska in December was made today by the Department of Commerce.

The contract for the station, the first of its kind, will be let within a short time and the department expects it to bring about the elimination of whistle in radio receiving sets.

W. D. Terrell, chief of the Commerce Department's radio division, said if the operator of any commercial or broadcasting station finds that his station is not operating on its authorized frequency or wave length, he can communicate with the miscreating station and request that his frequency be checked.

By doing this, Terrell said, the broadcasting station will be "put right" on its frequency and will be able to eliminate the heterodyne, or whistle, from the receiving set which will benefit the users of commercial radio sets.

Construction of the station resulted from an idea developed in the radio division and is the result of more than three years planning and research.

Lays Masculinity of Women to World War

Editor Boston American:

So another man has observed the increased masculinity among women. The letter of Arthur T. Combs and the results of his observations interested me greatly for I too, have noticed similar evidences of what he wrote. But isn't the World War to blame much for this cycle in sex tendencies?

Those which have no biological source can surely and directly be traced to the great War which made men of women and supermen of men. May I suggest to Mr. Combs that he read Dr. Will Durant's "Mansions of Philosophy," particularly the chapter on the Industrialism of Women. This may help him to understand a bit better a situation which bids fair to tax the most erudite of the country's minds.

Declares Man Knew How to Fight First

Editor Boston American:

A well-known writer for the Boston American said not long ago: Man knew how to fight long before he knew how to pray. I disagree with him. Why? Because worshipping is another form of praying. [illegible] not man at this time worship fighting and fighting, hatred? They unintentionally prayed to fight. Therefore I believe we prayed better. We knew how to fight, the art dates before action. I was glad to read that the authorities are going to send the Zepp stowaway home without giving him the chance to be feted, and made an hero figure. It's about time we stopped praising people who endanger the lives of others "just for a thrill."

SCOTS PROTEST 'INSULT' BY DAWES

Edinburgh, Scotland, Aug. 16 (AP)—The Duke and Duchess of York, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and Ambassador Dawes have insulted Sabbath keeping Scotland, in the opinion of the Scottish Free Church, a dissident sect of about 100 congregations.

A resolution passed at the assembly ended with regret that continued flouting of the Sabbath Day" and declared the Free Church renewed its testimony on behalf of the fourth commandment as binding without exception even in the great cares of this world."

The cause of their loyal happiness was in presentation of a purse for their silver wedding by twelve last Sunday. Rev. William Reavis of Govan said they felt it their duty, that they, people in touch beloved as the Duke of York and his wife, should lend themselves to the profanation of the Sabbath.

The commission felt no need that Sabbath observance was the greatest bond of the empire and he thought they ought to send a resolution to the Duke of York urging that such an insult to Scotland should not take place again." The plea was rejected and the resolution, slightly modifying his strong words, passed instead.

Premier MacDonald and Ambassador Dawes earned the body's censure for their memorable meeting at Forres, June 16, where they held their first conference on international naval reduction.

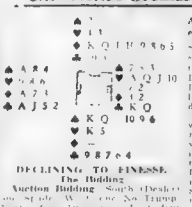
AUCTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

The World's Greatest Authority



DECLINING TO FINESSE.

Auction Bidding South (dealer) on Spade Will one No Trump North Two Clubs South Four Hearts

Salient Points of the Bidding

South [illegible] pre-emptive bid of Four Hearts. West would probably have doubled. North's pre-emptive bid of Four Clubs over the one No Trump was an obvious attempt to shut out a Heart response by East. East's bidding is more than sufficient to warrant the Heart response. The basic principle here encompasses the same in Auction and Contract.

The Play

South won the King of Spades with the Ace and won with Dummy's Ace. In counting his probable losers, East sees clearly that he can do same by conceding the adverse ace of a Heart and two Spade tricks as he can discard his losing Diamond on a good Club in Dummy. Therefore at Trick 2 he leads a Heart from Dummy and declines the finesse, prepared to win the Heart trick at once South wins the Heart return and takes his two Spade tricks and then, whatever he leads, Declarer gets off down the adverse trumps and take the rest of the tricks. Had Declarer finessed, South, upon winning would have led two high Spade upon which North could have discarded his two Clubs. South's ruff of a Club on the next lead, followed by South's ruff of a Diamond, would have set the contract two tricks.

N. H. ROAD HAS ELECTRIFIED YARD

Reducing by one hour the average time that cars are held in the receiving yard, the New Haven railroad's $500,000 freight yard improvement at Northup ave., Providence, was placed in operation today.

Freight cars are being electrically switched at this point for the first time. Switches in this yard were formerly manually operated.

In addition to value as a time-saver, the project should also insure a substantial decrease in employs injuries through elimination of "car riding," a decrease in the road's per diem costs and a saving in wages, fuel and materials.

All switches are track circuited, eliminating the possibility of switches being thrown underneath cars, with consequent reduction in damage to equipment and lading. There are 19 car retarder units and 34 switches controlled by two towers. The towers are 24 feet in height above the track level, giving the towermen an unrestricted view of the yard they control.

Amazing Story of Great War as Told by German Soldier

Read This First

Plunged from school into the World War, four 18-year-old schoolmate Germans set out for the Western Front with zest for the glory they imagine awaits them. They are Paul Baumer, author; Albert Kropp, Muller and Leer.

They become firm friends with four men in their own company. One is Tjaden, a skinny locksmith of 19; Haie Westhus, also 19; Detering, and Stanislaus Katczinsky, 40, who becomes the leader of the group.

Through the awful horrors of a gas attack the author takes his readers, and because of the pain and suffering he saw on every side he raises the question—"Is it merciful to shoot a comrade when he is wounded unto death?"

A French attack is on. Baumer and his comrades are in hand-to-hand fighting. He says, "If your own father came over with them (the enemy) you would not hesitate to fling a bomb into him."

Paul goes out on night patrol duty. Both sides begin firing. Paul hides in a shallow shell hole, while bullets sweep close above him. A man plunges in the pit, and Paul in terror, thrusts a dagger into him.

On the second night Paul creeps back to his lines.

How Go On With the Story

CHAPTER 30

AT night I cannot sleep. Kropp is restless too. The train rides easily over the rails. I cannot realize it all yet; a bed, a tram, home. "Albert!" I whisper.

"Yes——"

"Do you know where the latrine is?"

"Over to the right of the door, I think."

"I'm going to have a look." It is dark, I grope for the edge of the bed and cautiously try to slide down. But my foot finds no support. I begin to slip, the plaster leg is no help, and with a crash I lie on the floor.

"Damn!" I say.

"Have you bumped yourself?" asks Kropp.

"You could hear that well enough for yourself," I growl, "my head——"

A door opens in the rear of the car. The nurse comes with a light and looks at me.

"He has fallen out of bed——"

She feels my pulse and smoothes my forehead. "You haven't any fever, though."

"No," I agree.

"Have you been dreaming then?" she asks.

"Perhaps—" I evade. The interrogation starts again. She looks at me with her clear eyes, and the more wonderful and sweet she is the less am I able to tell her what I want.

I am lifted up into bed again. That will be all right. As soon as she goes I must try to climb down again. If she were an old woman, it might be easier to say, but she is so very young, at the most twenty-five, it can't be done, I cannot possibly tell her.

Then Albert comes to my rescue, he is not bashful, it makes no difference to him who is upset.

The train travels slowly. Sometimes it halts and the dead are unloaded. It halts often.

Albert is feverish. I feel miserable and have a good deal of pain, but the worst of it is that apparently there are still lice under the plaster bandage. They itch terribly, and I cannot scratch myself.

We sleep through the days.

BIG STOCKS OF OPIUM ARE TAKEN

Federal Men and Police, Heavily Armed, Unite for Cleanup

Sweeping down on Chinatown today in the largest and most spectacular raid in the history of the city, heavily armed squads of federal and local police arrested 30 Chinese after battering their way through the heavily barricaded doors of four alleged opium dens.

Chinatown was thrown into a turmoil within a few minutes after the arrival of the officers with hundreds on the streets watching them conduct the raids.

The raids were conducted by the federal narcotic squad assisted by members of the police headquarters liquor squad.

Opium in large quantities, pipes and other paraphernalia were seized.

The four places where raids were conducted were premises in Tyler, Edinboro, Hudson and Oxford sts.

HEAVILY ARMED

Members of both units gathered at the office of the federal narcotic squad at Young's Hotel early today armed with riot guns and in four automobiles four squads of mixed federal officers and local police each with a designated place to raid set out in different directions.

At the appointed time for the raids the four cars drove into the district. The raids were simultaneous, with police smashing their way through heavy steel-plated doors.

30 IN COURT TODAY

The 30 men arrested, charged with possession and being present where narcotics were found, were taken to police headquarters, where they were booked to appear in municipal court today.

The raids were under the direction of H. H. Wouters, federal narcotic agent in charge of New England.

GEN. EDWARDS IN FAVOR OF CALIFORNIA

Generous State, He Says; Calls West Coast Bathing Suits Ridiculous

"I have never seen such vision of such generosity shown to veterans as in California," said Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards on his return from that State, where he transacted business as a trustee of the estate of the late Lotta Crabtree.

While he praised California like a native son, Maj.-Gen. Edwards termed the bareleged women and the extreme backless bathing suits he saw "ridiculous." He deplored the fact that Massachusetts is one of the five states that have failed to build memorials to their World War dead.

"California has loaned $30,000,000 to war veterans at 4 per cent, with 21 years in which to pay," he said. "Soldiers have been provided with $5000 houses, and allowed $7500 if they preferred a farm.

"The result has been admirable. It has made good citizens and taxpayers of them. And the best of it is, it has made them realize that their part in the World War has not been forgotten. To date the State of California has not lost a cent in the transactions."

"Pasadena has the most beautiful World War memorial I have ever seen," Gen. Edwards said. "Los Angeles has a Patriots' building, erected by the city, in which are housed all the veteran organizations. Their work in co-operating is similar to that which Mrs. Edwards did when she got 24 veteran organizations to work together in providing Christmas presents for the boys."

He was delighted with the enthusiastic reception given him in all the west coast cities he visited. Newspapers "played him up," distinguished commuters met him and escorted him around and everything possible was done to make his visit pleasant.

Learning for the first time on his return here of Gen. Harbord's claim that the marines and not the 26th division deserves the credit for taking Belleau Wood, Maj.-Gen. Edwards said:

"My good friend Gen. Harbord has probably confused Belleau Wood with the town of Belleau. He has only to refer to the wonderful tribute that Marshal Foch paid the Yankee Division regarding the fighting in Belleau Wood to get the truth of the matter."

The Curious Quizzer

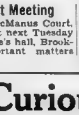
THE QUESTION

Should motorists who throw rubbish into the street and highways or campers who leave trash on the grounds, be punished by law?



MRS. ESTHER BAYE, Nazing ct., Roxbury—City employes in the street department or in the health department have plenty of work to do without having to clean the streets of rubbish tossed from automobiles, and motorists should keep that in mind when driving and do their bit in keeping their city as neat as possible. Some law should be put into effect making those responsible for such nuisances suffer by paying a fine.

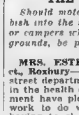
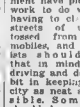
GEORGE A. GILLESPIE, Downer ave., Dorchester—It is surprising to find so many people in machines who have no compunction when they want to rid themselves of rubbish as to the proper place to dispose of it. Into the street is the first place some people always throw anything they have no further use for. If the same people who use the streets for a dumping ground go for an outing to some beach or to some mountain resort they leave the place all cluttered up with their leavings. Decayed food draws flies and other insects wherever it is left, and in lots of instances, because of the unhealthy conditions brought on by unsightly short-term tourists, others in the neighborhood are faced with possible sickness. I certainly believe that persons guilty of leaving behind a mess of unsightly rubbish should be summoned to court.





FRANK J. GILLESPIE, Horace st., East Boston—The streets would be free of such litter as one sees on the streets almost everywhere if automobile parties do what I do in disposing of unused things. I have no further need of. On returning from a good time in the woods or at the seashore all the eatables or newspapers or empty cartons such as many leave behind or throw into the street, I put in my machine and take home to be placed in the garbage can or in the ash barrel. Only slack and untidy people who ought to be arrested for such acts will be among other law-breakers when appearing in a court of justice if a law is passed to punish them.

MRS. CECIL S. HUME, West Morreland st., Dorchester—Nice people will never commit such acts as throwing their rubbish into the street, or leave food partially eaten in places they go on picnics. I suppose many no litter up properly where they have been spending the day and go away, leaving all kinds of perishable fruits and foods to decay. Such people should leave a place as clean as when they took possession of it, instead of leaving the cleaning up process for others who follow them. All refuse should be wrapped up and taken back home by automobile owners and be disposed of with other garbage and rubbish by putting it into the proper container for such articles. If careless people see fit to throw unwanted articles into the street they should be willing to pay a fine for the privilege of doing so.

SWING RECORD OF ELEVEN HOURS SET AS OFFICIALS CLAMP LID ON

ACTION TAKEN TO PROHIBIT CONTESTS

Sisters "Bike" Team Threatens to Outride Boys in Test in Dorchester

Boston's swing enthusiasts have something to shoot at in the mark established by Francis Tarasiewicz, 11, of Brockton, who completed 11 hours and 20 minutes in the swing at the James Edgar playground in the Shoe City.

The sport, which has gained remarkable headway here, is now coming under official ban as park and playground officials prohibit the tests, holding them to be menaces to the health of the youngsters.

It is also claimed that it is unfair to the other children for one boy or girl to monopolize a playground swing for hours at a time. The property owners are not anxious to entertain crowds of several hundred children in their yards which the swinging tests draw.

Having been shut out of Columbus Park playground and the esplanade on Columbia rd., the South Boston swingers attempted to continue the contest.

Francis Hart, 15, of 16 Leeds st., and George Slater, 13, of 54 Boston st., hung their swings from a rafter of a rear piazza on Boston st. They had been in progress for about an hour when the owner of the house came along and became worried about the security of the piazza. She ordered both swings taken down.

While the swinging endurance contest was spreading about Greater Boston light wildfire, children at the Adams st. playground, Dorchester, launched a new contest which gained immediate popularity.

A bicycle endurance test is under way and girls as well as boys are taking up the sport with all the enthusiasm that marked the start of the swinging craze.

Two sisters Elsie and Marie Murphy of King st., Dorchester, using two bicycles and working in half hour shifts, threatened to outride the boys and are presenting a strong claim for the premier honors.

"LOADED" CANE USED IN ROW

Giuseppi Pericco, 34, of Chelsea st., East Boston, is under arrest as the aftermath of a fight which threw the neighborhood of his home into excitement and resulted in the assault of Carl Della Russo of Decatur st. A weighted cane and a revolver were used, police say.

According to police, Della Russo was passing Pericco's house when the latter ran out and began to strike him with an ingeniously constructed cane, made of leather disks and weighted with shot.

Police say Della Russo beat off the assault and started to pursue Pericco into the house. The latter, police allege, procured a revolver from a bedroom and fired a shot, which missed Della Russo. Patrolman Whalen arrived and placed Pericco under arrest.

Bail Reduced in Holdup Case

In response to a plea by his attorney, the bail of Benjamin Mirable, of Frankfort st., East Boston, charged with being one of three men who held up and robbed a man and his wife of $19,200 in their East Boston home, about two weeks ago, was reduced from $25,000 to $15,000 by Judge Charles J. Brown in the East Boston court. The case was continued to Sept. 5, approximately the $8,000,000 mark.

Cadets Find American in Far Off Dalmatia

One letter, from A. D. Cushman, cadet first officer, told of pleasure in finding a Boston Evening American at Ragusa and the other, from Cadet R. H. McKenzie, detailing how the champion boxer of Jugo Slavia was defeated by Jim Conniff, a cadet from Newton.

Cadet First Officer Cushman's letter said:

"It all started when the champion of Jugo Slavia, Tomic Kruno, came on board while the ship was at anchor in the harbor of Spalto and after demonstrating the beautiful muscular development of his body in a series of exercises, ventured to challenge any of the young Americans who care to vie with him in the ring.

His challenge was taken up immediately by several of the cadets and arrangements were made to have the bout ashore.

"In four matches the Jugo Slavs were outclassed even to their champion. Here is a summary of the bouts.

"Gus Augustine, Charlestown, vs Denko Konti, three rounds easily won by Augustine.

"Buddy Ross, Cambridge, vs Smoje Petechin, three rounds all to Ross.

"Jim Conniff, Newton, vs Tomic Kruno, champion of Jugo Slavia, three rounds, Kruno far outclassed by the boy from Newton.

Bemis Funeral to Be Held Tomorrow

Funeral services for Albion F. Bemis, who died on Wednesday, will be conducted from his late residence in Babcock st., Brookline, at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Bemis had been prominent in Massachusetts politics. He was in both Houses and served and in both Houses and served in the Governor's Council under Governors Draper and Guild.

He is survived by a widow, who was Ella F. Messenger of Foxboro, and two sons, Raymond G. Bemis and Ralph A. Bemis.

HUB FIRM BUYS BIG BUILDING

The $18,000,000 office building in Washington financed and constructed by Boston interests two years ago was sold at mortgage foreclosure auction sale for $4,005,000 to the Boston investment firm of Hooper, Kimball & Williams. The sale terminates two years of litigation during which the building has stood almost entirely vacant. It faces the Treasury and overlooks the White House.

The National Shawmut Bank of Boston was trustee for a first mortgage bond issue totaling $5,000,000. The Liberty Trust Co. was trustee of a second mortgage bond issue.

The project was reported to have represented an original outlay of nearly $8,000,000 and the liabilities at the time of receivership were close to $6,000,000. The property has recently been appraised at approximately the $8,000,000 mark.

TWO EL JAMS IN ONE DAY

Hundreds of persons were obliged to walk from Common wealth ave. and Beacon st. when trolley traffic was tied up for blocks in the vicinity of Kenmore sq. The tie-up was caused when a trolley on an in-bound car fell down overhead wires inside the subway entrance at Kenmore sq.

The tie-up lasted for one-half an hour, and crowded cars on the Commonwealth ave. lines piled up as far out as the Cottage Farm bridge.

This was the second tie-up that the Elevated suffered in a day. A steam shovel being driven through Fremont st., near the Malden Church, Roxbury, tied up the Dudley-Allston traffic for half an hour when the shovel short circuited both trolley wires.

Priest Entertains Children of Parish

More than 300 children, members of the Rosary parish, Sixth st., South Boston, enjoyed an outing on Rainsford Island, yesterday, as guests of the Rev. Michael F. Doherty, acting pastor of the church.

The children left the corner of Broadway and C st. and were conveyed in special cars to Bowes wharf. Because of the fog which hung over the harbor, the party was required to go to Nantasket and then return to the Island. Bathing, baseball, races, and a lunch were on the program.

Mark B. Mulvey Reported Better

The condition of Mark B. Mulvey, 60, schoolhouse custodian for the city of Boston, who was struck by an automobile in West Roxbury, Wednesday night, was reported as improved at the Faulkner Hospital. He suffered a broken leg and other injuries. His wife was also seriously ill at their summer home in Scituate.

HUNDREDS SEE STARS AT HARVARD

Six Giant Telescopes at Observatory Open to Public

Men and women by the hundreds stood in line at the six giant telescopes at the Harvard Observatory and gazed back through thousands of years upon the wonder of the heavens.

On the greensward just 100 yards from the whirr of 20th century traffic they stood at telescope eyes, under the guidance of trained experts, and glimpsed the source of light that began to wing its course towards this whirling ball of earth in days far back in the history of this planet.

Light travels, so the experts say, at the rate of 186,000 miles per second. The star "Vega" known as the "electric light" of the sky because of its blue-white brilliance, was one of the most conspicuous objects in the sky and that star is said to be some 200 light years away. As a light year is 6,000,000,000,000 miles you multiply that by 200 and you get the distance of Vega from the earth.

Actually though the significance of the experience of seeing such distant objects was somewhat thrilling the sights seen through the telescopes, which were made available to the public last night through the courtesy of the Boyl Astronomical Club, were a little less than a mile and a little less complicated also.

The telescope which was trained on Vega was so adjusted that it not only distinguished both a white and a light blue in the light above its point. Most of the best known stars in the circle finally was made out as stabbing lines of white hot light, which can best be described as a folded miniature piece of many hues, lying on a velvet.

That, explained the expert, was the star Vega, 200 light years away from the earth, viewed through a 11 inch lens and 41 inch glass prism.

Without the prism which was fitted to the lens, the star would have been merely a white point of light. With the prism, however, it was this starlight reflected in the mortal but immortality. Whatever lights formed by the gases which hath no beginning may be seen surround it.

Old Boston in Pictures—No. 32

MASSIVE apartment houses today tower over the scene depicted in this 32nd Old Boston picture. This sketch, reproduced through the courtesy of the Boston Athenaeum, shows a number of Bostonians spearing eels through the ice of one of those numerous ponds that are now filled in land known as the Back Bay. This picture was made in the winter of 1852. Note the railroad trestle and the smoking locomotive in the background. Another of these Old Boston pictures will appear tomorrow.

THE WHOLE FURNITURE INDUSTRY COMBINES TO PRODUCE AUGUST VALUES!

Manufacturers and retailers appreciate that August is the month when furniture needs are most apparent, and when those needs are most certain to be supplied.

To make easy the buying of a single piece or furnishings for a complete home, they make this month the outstanding value event of the year. Stocks are complete in all the stores—and because they will so readily be converted into cash they are priced at amazingly low figures.

That's the August Furniture Sales story in a few words—complete stocks, sold quickly and sold on the year's smallest margin of profit. That's why it pays to look around the stores this month for one piece or for suites.

A CHAP CAN'T BE BLAMED FOR THINKING

MOST of the afternoon free thinkers and drinkers, believe: That Pebbles Beach is only a stone's throw from San Francisco. (It's a mere 125 miles.)

That the Boxing Commission did a great stunt going down to Maloney's camp. (Why shouldn't they help the game once in a while?)

That the races at Saratoga are fixed. (All the bookies are screeching because the favorites can't win.)

That the best fight tickets are given to the press. (Some of us are lucky to have a runaround, as Mister Grimm calls an "admittance only" slip, when the hour of a show arrives.)

That Campolo is a great fighter. (Heeney gave him a tough time, until the Rock From Down Under lost the strength imparted by daily shots of 'eavy hale and a dash of bitters.)

Nick Flatley

Pitchers' Turn Now

Low score baseball has come back. Brave pitchers in the last five games have looked like the chuckers of the olden days. The Tribe has lost three out of those five games, but the sharpshooting was good enough to collect them all. If the other pitchers hadn't been doing pretty well also.

Perhaps the ball has been deadened a bit. Signs point that way. But that isn't the half of it. The pitchers deserve some of the credit. They have been allowed lately to darken the ball. They can rough it up a bit. Result, they are more confident. They can put a little extra stuff on.

Batters have been accustomed to brand new baseballs that did no peculiar sailing. They will be blind for a while until they catch the knack of the funny twists and shoots that a properly roughened ball, tossed by an expert, can take.

A deader ball, with the pitchers given some leeway, will bring back the low scores. But it will not help the enthusiasm.

Lamped Around the Village

A Successor for Helen

Miss Sarah Palfrey, 16-year-old tennis wonder, may take over the crown when Helen Wills abdicates. Miss Palfrey, with all her best tennis ahead, has reached the ranks of the real stars. Her play in recent tournaments has surprised the experts.

Those who had been granting the next queenship to Helen Jacobs are wondering now. Miss Palfrey has played such consistently good tennis against the best opposition the world knows, that she would seem to be the logical successor to the title.

The brilliant Helen isn't through. But stars do not last long in tennis. The Queen has reigned for quite a few years, and has been pressed in several matches of late. Her days of breezing through by sheer skill seem to have passed.

And Miss Palfrey appears to be one of a youthful group ready to step up to hold the crest for something of a long stretch.

Nick-Nacks

Youthful instinct always is right: the endurance swing champ has himself refuelled with wine—enough of that will keep anyone swinging—Paul Whelton found a five-leaf clover in the landing field of his Newton estate: he needs it—E. Mack says he would sign up Campolo, but fears he wouldn't fit in the Garden—Ben Levias admits that Bill Squires will make a big splash in the swimming championships—college football star has gone three days in hand-holding contest; education is a great thing.

"Dead" Ball Proves Big Help to Braves

U. S. YACHTS IN LEAD FOR HOOVER CUP

MARBLEHEAD, Aug. 16— The American yacht squadron sailing their first international match in 30 square metre boats nosed out an exciting victory over the Germans in the first series of races for the President Hoover Cup.

The leading American boat, Tipler III., beat the first German, The Gluckauf V., by a scant nine seconds, with Miss Elizabeth Hovey in the Oriole only eight seconds astern, and the Hahn, another foreigner, 29 seconds behind the young American girl, then came the German Ecorfle, 12 seconds later, and finally Commodore C. A. Welch in the Yankee only 22 seconds after.

The score for the day was United States 11, Germany 10.

14 CH PLANS PART

Luck played an astonishing part in the race, especially in the last quarter of a mile, when the fleet which was strung out nearly a mile at the windward turn bunched together up at the finish.

Victory, which was pushed on the Yankee most of the afternoon, suddenly shifted to the Gluckauf V., and then flew over to the Tipler III., 50 feet from the line, all through the vagaries of Massachusetts Bay weather.

The race itself was to have been a 3¼ mile beat to windward and a run to the finish, and for the first half hour the wind kept its promise.

The Yankee won the honors at the start, but a minute later the Gluckauf V. and Rickers with their big Genoa jibs pulling hard, ran past her to weather, as Commodore Welch ticked away to port.

MOTHER GIRL SKIPPER

Instead of one of the Germans following the fleeting Americans they both kept ahead and smothered Miss Hovey in the Oriole. When the Kickers started after the Yankee the latter was a mile to the westward and was the first to snatch the breeze from southeast to south.

The Yankee had a nice lead at the weather mark over the Kickerie and Gluckauf V. with the rest trailing. The times at the turn: Yankee, 3.11.48; Kickerie, 3.14.21; Gluckauf V, 3.14.31; Tipler III, 3.16.51; Oriole, 3.19.31; Hahn 3.19.56.

All hands shook out spinnakers for the run home, and in the first 10 minutes the Yankee had gained on the Germans and the Oriole had pulled out a nice lead on the Hahn while the Tipler III was drawing up on the leaders.

HEENEY LOSES TO CAMPOLO

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 16—Victorio Campolo, Argentine heavyweight, won a technical knockout in the ninth round of his 10-round bout with Tom Heeney of New Zealand at Ebbets Field.

After a fairly even battle of it for seven rounds, Campolo floored the New Zealander with a right to body in the eighth round, but Heeney came back before a count could be started.

In the ninth round Campolo smothered Heeney under a barrage of rights and lefts and finally floored him for a count of seven.

Gamely the New Zealander got up but he was out on his feet. The referee stopped the bout and led "Honest Tom" to his corner.

Campolo weighed 225; Heeney 204½.

Paul Swiderski, Syracuse heavyweight, knocked out Eddie Melcum, Harlem negro, in rapid fashion in the first 10-rounder. Swiderski finished Melcum with a right to the chin in 2m. 25s. of the first round.

Ted Sandwina, curly-haired German heavyweight, now domiciled in Sioux City, Ia., scored a technical knockout over Phil Mercurio of New Rochelle, N. Y., in the ninth round of the 10-round semi-final.

Mercurio was down for counts of nine in the second and third rounds and twice in the ninth before the referee stopped the battle.

GAMES AT WIGWAM SHOW THAT BALL, NOT HURLERS, KEEPS SCORES DOWN

By JOE CASHMAN

EITHER the dynamite has been taken out of the ball or the Braves' pitching staff has changed from a mediocre one to the best in the land, in the last week.

In the past two games, the Pirates, heaviest-hitting club in the circuit, have made but five hits, three off Percy Lee Jones on Wednesday, two off Ed. Brandt, yesterday, and all of these were singles.

Before that, the Cubs, second-best hitting outfit, were here. Selbold, Smith and Cantwell each held the leaders to six hits.

Only two home runs and one triple have been made by enemy batsmen at the Wigwam since last Saturday.

Is it the pitching or the ball?

HAVING seen all these contests, we are inclined to think that the ball has been deadened. Not that each of the aforementioned hurlers didn't turn in a great game, he did.

But none of the performances with the possible exception of that of Brandt, was as great as it appeared on paper.

At least 15 drives were made by hostile batters in these games that would have been home runs a month ago. All they turned out to be were easy flies.

In the ninth inning of the second Pirate game, Traynor, Comorosky and Sheely each hit a ball right on the nose and sent it traveling in the general direction of the left field stands. Much eagle-bit balls landed far up in these bleachers in earlier games, but these three were dragged down by Tribal outfielders with ease.

THE National League started to discolor balls a few weeks ago to curb the hitting, but it isn't this practice that is responsible for the unusually small number of long drives made in the last six games at the Tepee.

Discoloring makes the ball harder to hit, probably, but it doesn't retard its progress after it has been well met.

The ball now in use is not traveling nearly as far when squarely hit as was the sphere in vogue early in the season.

This deduction may bring loud denials from the magnates, but that will not alter the fact that since the Braves have come home the balls they have been using are much slower than they have been for years.

And judging from the showing the Red Sox twirlers have been making in the West, there are a few slow balls in use in the junior circuit, also.

APPARENTLY, the magnates have finally decided that the fans have grown tired of seeing nothing but slugging orgies such as nearly all games have been for the past two or three years, but they aren't absolutely certain of it.

So, without officially announcing it, they are putting a deader ball into use to see how the customers will receive it.

Hub fans, judging from the enthusiasm they have shown since the Braves came back, are perfectly satisfied with the new apple and the faster and better-played games that result from its use.

GORHAM Leverett and Art Delaney are the only Tribal pitchers who has not appeared on the mound since the team returned home. One or the other will toil in the third game against the Pirates this p. m. French is the choice of Manager Donie Bush.

The way the hurlers have been working of late, it wouldn't be surprising if the Wigwam saw a no-hit game one of these fine afternoons.

Big Ed. Brandt came mighty close to it in Thursday's pastime. He was nicked for one clean single in the eighth. The other hit charged against him could just as well have been called an error.

Roslindale Looks for Twilight Title

By DICK McSWEENEY

SALEM'S postponed contest with Taunton, originally scheduled for Tuesday, was to have been played tonight, but since Salem has a game booked with the Danvers Town Team, the game has been put over indefinitely.

Roslindale fans are confident that their team will take second half honors without being extended to any great efforts.

As a reason for their confidence the fans point out the fact that the Mellen clan gathered 22 safe blows in its recent game with Reading. If Roslindale's sluggers can continue to hit in their present fashion the team's participation in the playoff series for the Twi Championship is assured.

The shifting of Duncan to second place in the Roslindale batting order in place of Butenhuys, who now hits in third position, may or may not have had anything to do with the flurry of base-hits in the Reading game, but it is significant that the full batting power of the Roslindale outfit was not unleashed until this change had been made.

South Boston in Roslindale's fog this evening and since Southie has also been noted for its sluggers, a heel-hitting game is in prospect at Fallon Field.

Bill Rose will send his slants over the platter for Roslindale while Smith will perform similar motions for South Boston.

This game promises to be one of the best attractions of the evening.

Jim Kelly will be in the Taunton box tonight when Salem comes to town. The invaders will use Lorne Johnson and are making a secret of their desire to win the affair. Salem misses Selly Thurston's heavy stick and his capable play at the hot corner but Hansbury seems to be filling the bill satisfactorily.

Jim Shea will toss for Dorchester tonight against the invading Malden club. The visitors plan to start Hall on the rubber. Dorchester's showing in recent games has been disappointing but the home team looks for a win tonight.

SINUS EPIDEMIC DEVELOPS HERE

Physicians Attribute It to Vogue for No Hats

An epidemic of sinus and mastoids has developed in Greater Boston and surgeons last night attributed it as an aftermath of the hatless fad which prevailed here during the winter months.

So many patients besieged the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary within the last several days that it was necessary to place extra cots in the wards and halls to care for the overflow.

At the infirmary it was said that there were more cases of sinus and mastoids in the past few weeks than in a number of years. Many of the victims said that they had recovered from severe colds or influenza only to find that they were soon suffering acutely from pains behind the ear and between the eyes.

The patients included all ages and residents, who had tossed their caps and hats aside as conditions in getting the most out of the winter sports of Nature. Some time ago a warning was sounded that the hatless persons were subjecting themselves to serious ills, but the wise thought the hatter or the milliner was behind this sort of propaganda.

A number of physicians in metropolitan Boston reported last night that many of their patients complained of ear and eye trouble following colds. Some of these had left off wearing their hats now and then.

A cap is the most comfortable and convenient style of head-wear for men that today's fashion knows. The appropriate materials of which they are made gives every man opportunity to choose that color, weight, and texture that fits his personal appearance best.

NEW BEDFORD, Aug. 16—In the semifinal rounds of the third annual Country Club of New Bedford invitation, which will be fought out today, Brad Oxnord, the medalist of the qualifying round, meets Chick Grasse of Mt. Pleasant and Seth J. Besse, Jr. Last year's winner, plays Carl Nettelbladt, the lone hitter from Green Hill, Worcester.

This is the strongest quartet that has ever played in a semi-final round of a New Bedford Invitation. In spite of the fact that two of the supposedly leading players of the championship flight were eliminated yesterday.

Bill Grimes

Oxnard and Grasse had little trouble reaching the semi-finals. Oxnard's first day's work consisted of victories over Charles Ryder, New Bedford, and Amory Houghton, New York.

Ryder put up a fine fight to send the medalist back to Providence.

Shooting a 79 but one stroke over par on the former Rhode Island amateur titleholder was playing his steadiest golf. Houghton, who is the son of the former United States ambassador to Great Britain, put Joe Fay of Rockport out of the running in the first round after a hard fight but he was overwhelmingly defeated by Oxnard in the afternoon.

GRASSE WINS

Grasse opened up with a 5 and 3 win over Eddie Bustere, Segregansett and then eliminated Dave Whiteside in the first round.

Seth Besse was the boy who was called upon to shoot at top form in order to get to the semifinals. Besse and Joe Monahan battled for 17 holes in the morning round yesterday and but for the actions of the Sandy Burr player's putter in the pinches the bottom would have dropped out of the tournament as far as the local interest is concerned.

Monahan was given many chances to put the defending champion out of the running but he was unable to get his putts to drop and a couple of three-putt greens ruined him and sent Besse to the second round.

BESSE HALTS THREAT

It was in the afternoon that Besse did yeoman service, for he put a stop to one of the most dangerous threats in the championship division, John Merwin of Concord.

The elimination of Merwin and Whiteside furnished the biggest surprise of the first day's play, for both were potential finalists. But even with Merwin and Whiteside out, there is more than the usual amount of class in the championship flight.

There is little choice in either of the semifinal matches. Oxnard and Grasse are well matched, while Besse, due to his keen knowledge of his home course, is a slight favorite over Nettelbladt.

Oxnard is a fine match player and it is doubtful if he will allow himself to be upset by the driving of Grasse, one of the longest hitters in the state.

Oxnard will be outhit off the tees many yards but he is expected to be tighter around the greens than the Mt. Pleasant boy. If Oxnard and Grasse play as expected this will be one of the best and closest matches of the tournament.

Besse is meeting another long hitter in Nettelbladt. The Green Hill player is about as long off the tees as Grasse an he will have a decided advantage over the New Bedford champion in this department. But Besse is a seasoned match player and it is doubtful if he will be any more disturbed than Oxnard watching Grasse whale into tee shots.

Caddy Plays for R. I. Golf Title

Providence, Aug. 16—Raymond Perry, the 16-year-old Pawtucket caddy and mill worker, remains the last obstacle in the way of Tommy Tailer of Newport regaining his Rhode Island state junior golf championship.

These two youngsters won their respective semifinal round matches in the current tournament at Metacomet. Today they squared off in a 36-hole battle for the title last wrested by Joe Pasqule.

MR. BOSTON by JACK CONWAY

FRED DOHERTY, whose clever press agent stories have brought fame and comfortable hotel suites to thousands of chorus girls, collided with Steve Mahoney, sports editor of the Record, as he hurried into the office to see Mr. Boston.

Steve took a peek at Fred's dome which is beginning to lose its covering.

"I have more hair than you," said Steve.

Fred disputed the statement and Sam Carrick was named as official referee. His count was 4 to 3 in favor of Steve.

"Anyhow, you only won by a hair," said Fred.

He then called Mr. Boston's attention to the fact that the pictures of the recent Loughran-Braddock bout will be shown at the Old Howard beginning next Monday.

"This showing will give the fans an opportunity to size up Loughran," said Fred. "The fans will be able to see for themselves what chance he will have when he collides with Jack Sharkey at the Yankee Stadium, New York, on September 26."

Jack Conway

REV. ROBERT P. BARRY of the Catholic Charitable Bureau has asked Mr. Boston to help 650 sickly children by printing the following notice:

"One of the features of the Garden Party tuns-row at the Children's Vacation House, Sunset Point, Nantasket, conducted by the Catholic Charitable Bureau, will be the appearance of Jack Sharkey as master of ceremonies.

"He will bring with him the greater part of the boxing stable of his manager, Johnny Buckley, to perform in the program of entertainment.

"Jack will also introduce Danny Duggan and other theatrical numbers of Boston, who are giving their services to aid this cause which provides a vacation for 650 sickly and under-nourished children each summer."

MR. BOSTON says he considers this a fine take in and declares he will be on hand at Sunset Point tomorrow night.

"Attorney Bernard Killion, Dave Posner, Asst. Dist.-Atty. Fred Sheehan, former Senator Jimmy Brennan, Jimmy Gallagher, Jackie Williams and everybody else in the South Shore's Who's Who will be there," declared the veteran.

"I HAVE not met anybody during the past week who is not seeking a couple of Annie Oakleys for the Maloney-Bertazzolo bout," said Mr. Boston. "If the cash sale is one-tenth as good as the demand for Annie Oakleys, the show should draw a couple of million dollars.

"Maybe I'll play golf in the newspapermen's tournament at Winchester on Monday and avoid the rush of the free ticket brigade.

"THE proposed bout between Jake Zeransky and Honeyboy Finnegan will go over until the indoor season. Eddie Mack of the Garden is trying to match Zeransky for a bout with Bruce Flowers at Braves Field. Flowers handed Ray Miller, Chicago southpaw who flattened Jimmy McLarnin, a licking at Philadelphia the other night.

"CHARLEY PARKER, South End featherweight, who has been spending the summer at a camp in New Hampshire, is prepared to return to the fistic wars. Parker has packed on weight and will campaign as a 133-135 pounder in future.

"CHARLEY MOONEY tells me that when Alderman Bob Hosley of Somerville offered a cup to the winner of the tug-of-war contest before the Medford firemen and Charlestown police he started a craze that has caught on big. Four teams are already in the field for the championship of Somerville.

"Teams have been formed by the firemen, police, highway department and by a local ice concern. Twenty years ago there was a tug-of-war match at every picnic. A barrel of beer was always on the sideline and furnished as much kick as the 18th hole of today."

LYNN GAINS HALF GAME

By CHARLES HOFFMAN

Lynn gained another half game on Manchester when they took the Nashua team into camp by the score of 6 to 4. Manchester was scheduled for a doubleheader with Lewiston, but wet grounds called off hostilities and the Lynn club is now but half a game behind the Blue Sox.

Schmit was hit hard in the early innings of the game, but steadied down and Lynn came through with three runs in the seventh, winning the game.

Joe Huggie, who is now playing shortstop in the absence of Bigsom, is going like a house afire. He was the cause of Lynn winning the second game of the doubleheader with New Bedford Wednesday, and in the game with Nashua, he had another field day.

He made two hits out of four times at bat, and stole three bases, one steal bringing in a run.

Tom Denoville, Nashua manager, continued his heavy hitting, getting two hits out of four times at bat, including a double. Tom certainly has done his share to bring the Nashua club up to good standing in the New England League.

The Fitchburg-Portland game was called off on account of rain, and will be played as part of a doubleheader Saturday, at Portland.

Marshall Smith, former Brockton twirler, and now with New Bedford, held his former mates to six hits winning his game, 8 to 0, and killed the Brockton teams chances of going into the first division.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

Here will be an advantageous place, I think, to acquaint you with a little trick of the wrists in the golf swing, and especially so since this begins at the beginning of the back swing. First, the main battle you will have to fight out uses the beginning of the back swing as the battle mat. It is the constant tendency to hurry away from the ball. Even the best of the pros have to back up and discipline this part of their back swing now and then. So learn to school yourselves early to be slow at the start back—slow, free and comfortable, and devoid of anxiety to hit the ball. In the final analysis it is anxiety to hit the ball that promotes quickness away in the back swing. And this quickness away with the club can promote a fast break of the wrists there, but due this tendency in the wrists and keep them in their address relationship to the shaft as you begin.

JUNIOR RACERS AT REVERE

The star midget pace followers of the future will be seen in action at the Revere Cycle Track tomorrow night, when five juniors line up for a 40-mile race behind the roaring engines. It has been a long time since this type of racing has been seen in Boston, and two weeks ago when the youngsters raced at Revere, they were given a tremendous ovation.

Al Keith, Bruno Laura, Anthony Bernaid, Peter Calise and Joe McCann will compete and from these five, Nat Butler feels sure he will find at least one who will be ready to step up into fast company next year.

Of the five Keith probably looks the most promising, and if he continues his success, he will surely be riding in the championships when another season rolls around.

Dan Donnelly, the Champion of Ireland

DAN DONNELLY is almost as much of a legendary figure as Fin McCool. But there can be no doubt about Dan's performances [illegible] and of his personal magnetism which endeared him to the people of Dublin quite irrespective of his pugilistic prowess, which was [illegible]

[illegible] was one of the [illegible] to be known as a "Corinthian" in the days when [illegible] was the rule of the ring. He was a contemporary of Jack Randall, the champion who defeated Humphries, and of Tom Cribb, who defeated Randall. Cribb was the champion who defeated the famous Negro, Molineaux, and he was the champion who refused to meet Tom Spring, the English champion, because Spring was a publican. Cribb was a pugilistic purist and he refused to meet Spring because he thought it would be beneath the dignity of a champion to fight a man who was in the liquor business.

Dan was not met with considerable success in the British ring was inclined to view Dan as something soft, but he learned differently shortly after the bout began. Dan did most of the leading and Hall, most of the running, according to the rather imperfect accounts of the bout which have come down to us. Donnelly was down [illegible] but he had [illegible] he was in front was a split up history fans to record how many times Hall went down but we may guess that he was grounded one way or another in all of the 15 rounds the battle endured excepting the solitary one in which Donnelly slipped.

Hall never knew [illegible] defeat began in the [illegible] after the 15th round Hall was counted out complaining to the referee that Donnelly had fouled him three by striking him when he was down. One authority said that both men lost the encounter.

It is estimated that the battle, which was for a purse of 50 guineas, was witnessed by 20,000 persons. Great was the jubilation over Donnelly's success. Bonfires were lighted in the streets of Dublin and the celebration continued until far into the next day.

MALONEY IS FAVORED TO WIN

NOW that Ricardo Bertazzolo, as well as Jim Maloney, has been pronounced fit by Dr Isaac Klein of the Massachusetts Boxing Commission every thing is going ahead in the plans for the ten-round bout between these huskies at Braves Field on next Monday night

Maloney continues to rule a favorite in the betting, but there is considerable Bertazzolo money in sight

There is great interest in the match and the show is expected to draw a record gate

Only two hard days of work remain for these heavyweight principals as each man is planning to finish his hard boxing tomorrow. They will take things easy on Sunday and will arrive in the Hub on Monday in time to weigh in at the boxing commission office at 3 p. m.

Meanwhile there has been a staggering last minute rush for choice seats, which indicate that the estimated gate of $60,000 may be improved for now it is expected that the bout will draw a record throng of 30,000 spectators Only once before has such a throng turned out in this city. This occurred during a visit of Jack Dempsey to this city

The entire supporting card Monday night promises a party of fast action Especially are the fans interested in the semifinal between Benny Kid Carter, Mexican featherweight, and Frankie Moore of the North End These have recently met in one of the best matches of the season.

Three six rounders also are carded with Nat Kewler of New York meeting Johnny Casper of Boston and Johnny Nemis of Halifax taking on Al Delgiolio of the North End. Vittora Livan, middleweight champion of Italy, one of Bertazzolo's sparring partners, meets Tommy Smoot of South Boston

In two heavyweight four rounders, Jimmy Griffin, Cambridge, opposes Danny Regan of Gardner and Mike Raffaeli of Sharon faces Big Boy Burlap of Westerly, R. I.

TROPHIES FOR BIG RACE AT BOOTHBAY

BOOTHBAY HARBOR, Aug. 16—An added race carrying three silver trophies, offered by an anonymous racing enthusiast, was announced by Commodore "Pete" Welles of the Boothbay Harbor Yacht Club.

This race is limited to boats of not more than 90-horse power, and along with the news of the gift came the announcement that 10 entrants had promptly appeared. Five of them are 85-horse power Downeasters.

A roster of entries made at noon today showed 73 entries a full 48 hours before the starting gun. Twenty-two other boats must be added to this total, 10 in the 90-horse power race and 12 from Winthrop, which were entered by telegram today, making a total of 95. This points to a total, when the regatta opens, of not less than 150 craft ranging from one-cylinder outboards to cruisers and 2-6-horse power hydroplanes.

Phil James arrived tonight with his fleet of speed machines. With a staff of helpers, two outboards, a cruiser and his new hydroplane, Rip IV, mounted on a float. "Admiral" Phil's parade looked like the circus coming to town when he led the procession into the harbor. Ross Maddocks, president of the New England Outboard Motor association, is here with three outboards

RED SOX NEED HEAVY HITTERS

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 16—Every time Bill Carrigan reads of the home run feats by such fence-busting sons as Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx and Hack Simmons he sighs and moans

"That's all this club needs to show improvement," the manager of the Red Sox said today, as he talked about the light hitting by his ball players

The only member of the Red Sox squad who is in the .300 batting class is Ken Williams, and he has not played regularly this season Next in line is Russell Scarritt, but with a mark of .294

The chance of the game had turned Carrigan's plans to get some place with his Red Sox. When he was winning more than 10 years ago, the opposition was not scoring many runs against Dutch Leonard, Joey Wood, Ernie Shore, Carl Mays, Babe Ruth, Hugh Bedient, Ray Collins and those who hurled for the Red Sox.

FAVORITES WIN AT ESSEX

Manchester-By-the-Sea, Aug. 16—Ray Gorton and Paul Sandborn, 1928 winners of the Essex four-ball tournament, continued to advance in the 16th annual invitation event here, but they were obliged to go to the home green to clinch their third round match against two home club members, J. L. Hall, Jr., and R. C. Curtis.

Another winning team today was the 1927 winners Talbot C. Chase of Essex and Jose C. Harris of The Country, who eliminated Ralph Pope and H. C. Van Voorhis by consistently steady play

With Chase contributing a birdie at the fourth, the ultimate winners were 36 to the turn. Harris' card including an approximate 5 on the fourth for a 40 out.

When the match ended at the 16th hole the winners were 2 under 68, teaming well until the death blow had been struck

Franklin T. Pfeister, Jr., and Charles E. Mason put out Sam Felton and Ted Tewksbury by an even 4 call, the end coming at the 14th green.

Ray Stanley and W. D. Swan, Jr., the Charles River-Essex team, won three of the first four holes against H. L. Taylor and C. R. Arnold, and were five up at the ninth and coasted home safely.

A. A. U. Head Attacks Article by Paddock

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (INS)—The Amateur Athletic Union of the United States today unloosed a broadside against Charles W. Paddock, the California sprinter, in the form of an answer to his attack on amateur athletics and the Amateur Athletic Union. Paddock's criticism appeared in an article published in a national magazine.

Avery Brundage, president of the A. A. U., issued a statement in which he declared Paddock's article "is filled with inaccuracies and untruths, and is sensationalism of the rankest sort"

It is stated that Paddock through the article over his own signature, "admits that he has been sailing under false colors and never has been an amateur honestly, actuated solely by the love of the game"

"It seems unfair," continued Brundage, "for Paddock, who has made so much money from the lecture platform, the movies and the magazines, while eluding athletic authorities and keeping his amateur standing, to couple himself with poor Joey Ray and unfortunate Charles Hoff, who were so unsuccessful in their attempt to make a living from amateur athletics and were declared professionals

"Paddock's article is filled with inaccuracies and untruths, is sensationalism of the rankest sort and is just what might be expected from one whose record has been replete with efforts to cash in on his athletic prowess regardless of the rules"

It was explained at A. A. U. headquarters that in answering Paddock the A. A. U. had departed from its policy of refraining from replying to magazine or newspaper articles which criticize the organization Brundage regarded Paddock's story as "grossly unfair."

GIRL BEATS MEN TENNIS STARS

Miss Anna Koll, New Orleans school teacher, defeated Dale Sherwood, 6—0, 6—2, in a quarter-final match in the Jarvis Field tennis tournament.

The tournament is the first in which women compete on even terms with men, and Miss Koll left no doubt as to her superiority in the match yesterday.

N. Y. Bullfighter Is Hero in Spain

Madrid, Aug. 16 (INS)—Sidney Franklin of Brooklyn was hailed today as the Spanish equivalent of the "Babe Ruth of the Bullring"

Flowers and presents are being piled upon the Yankee matador after his sensational feat of killing a bull with one thrust of his sword Wednesday. This was better than the showing of the most skillful Spanish bullfighters. Franklin had his success in his encounter with his second bull as he appeared to be bothered by the intense heat

Franklin expects to take part in other contests soon. Cigarette brands are attracted to this arena by the news of his prowess

Offering will be made shortly of 71,000 units, one share of class A and one share of class B in the Vortex Manufacturing Corporation, it was announced yesterday by Hayden, Stone & Co. Headed by Jesse Isidor Straus, chairman of the board, and Arthur J. Morris, president, the corporation is to be formed as a holding company.

The Vortex Manufacturing Corporation will control the Burt Cup Co., Inc., manufacturer of paper drinking cups and containers, and Universal Paper Products, Inc., manufacturer of paper cups and containers. It has outstanding 200,000 shares of class A stock and 200,000 shares of class B stock, and 100,000 shares of preferred stock.

Application has been made to list this stock on the New York and Detroit stock exchanges.

The class A stock is entitled to cumulative dividends at the annual rate of $2 a share before any dividends are paid on the class B shares. The preferred stock carries a 7 per cent dividend.

In the event of liquidation of the company, the preferred stock will be entitled to $55 a share after all creditors have been paid, including corporate debts in the amount of $500,254, and to $7.34 a share. The class A stock is entitled to $1 a share and to 85% of the remaining assets, while the class B stock is entitled to the remaining 15% of the assets.

Among the companies whose earnings are the basis of the statement in the United States Industrial Alcohol Co., the Pullman Company, Sears, Roebuck & Company, Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., J. C. Penney Company, Schenley Products Co., Inc., Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, Standard Oil Co. of California, Standard Oil Co. of Indiana and Texas Corporation.

The balance sheet as of June 30, 1929, which is said never has had an equal in the history of the company, will be presented to the stockholders at the annual meeting on August 27 and a dividend declared at the regular meeting of the directors on the same day.

The directors at the recent Paris conference were associated only by the unanimous desire to promote the welfare of the enterprise from the standpoint of the investment and the public after retiring more than $1,000,000 preferred stock and the payment of more than $1,000,000 in dividends.

Irrespective of the merits of the dispute, it is plain that world business has most to gain if a ultimate agreement is reached. A new break would undo the widespread good feeling which was created from the Paris conference, the success of which was a signal for the undertaking of business enterprises throughout Europe, especially in Germany. Immediately after the successful issue of the Paris conference, American copper manufacturers reported an increase in foreign buying.

After Wall Street caught its second breath, it modified its original view of the reduction rate at New York from 5 to 6 per cent. The fact that the move was not accompanied by any punitive call money rates indicated as a psychological factor in the seasonal easing by the Federal Reserve Board. In past years it has been customary for the Federal Reserve banks, about $300,000,000 of extra Federal Reserve credit between August and December to finance the movement of crops and the fall trade expansion. The easy movement of a reduction in the buying rate acceptances from 4½ to 4 per cent indicates that the action intends to provide the credit needed this year and that the movement of the rediscount rate of the market from pushing up the additional credit needed for agriculture and industry.

The double barrelled Reserve policy, of the holding down of call money rates indicates that the main concern of the Federal Reserve has been to prevent the legitimate economic requirements. After the turn of the year, the Federal Reserve will be free to take more aggressive measures against the Wall Street bulls if circumstances warrant. But if the market's speculation flares up again, the Reserve may after the seasonal peak is reached to a still higher rediscount rate.

There is a precedent in the history of the New York bank for a 6 per cent rate. The influence of the Federal Reserve Board who first advocated a 6 per cent rate, indicated that if necessary further sharp advances of a full per cent at a time should be made in order to check the flow of credit into security loans.

A study of the character of United States steel Corporation Common appeals to both speculators and investors, even when the stock goes to unprecedented heights as has been done of late. There is usually a speculation on the part of the investing element to sell some of their holdings to speculators. In the four months ended July 31, the amount changing hands in brokers' loans—presumably stock held speculatively—increased 1.59 per cent.

In this so-called new era, when it is common for favored industrial and public utility stocks to sell 20 or more times present earnings, the 27 leading dividend paying railroad stocks which were selling earlier in the week about 12 times earnings, and were offering a return of 5.4 per cent on the cash investment. The disparity in prices amply discounts the limited expectancy for future growth of earnings, in my opinion.

NETHERLANDS MARKET FOR U. S. STOVES

An excellent potential market for American cooking appliances in the Netherlands is said to exist, although the actual sales of American stoves are as yet not great, according to a report from Consul-General Charles F. Hoover, made public by the Department of Commerce. Their higher price and the greater freight charges in bringing them to this country tend to place them at a disadvantage with a number of German makes long on this market.

In Holland, less than 5¼ per cent of the population pay taxes on incomes greater than $2000, and less than 1% per cent on incomes above $4000. It must be remembered, too, that even the lowest grade taxpayer sacrifices close to a month's wages toward his governmental support, the higher grades proportionately more.

It will thus be seen that an initial expenditure of one or two hundred dollars for a high-grade electric or gas stove is greater than the average Dutch purse can bear. For some time to come the larger number of sales will be to the upper 6 per cent of the population.

By far the greatest demand, especially in the cities and towns, is still for gas stoves. Even many outlying districts are linked up with the gas mains of the larger cities. In Amsterdam—population 750,000—the monthly charge for gas is about four cents (United States currency) per cubic meter, which approximates $1.32 per 1000 cubic feet. In the cities practically every home has its gas stove, even though it be but a one or two burner stove placed on a table.

In the poorer city homes, as chief means of cooking, a small, low, two or three wick circular enamel kerosene stove is used, resting on a shallow, enamel bowl, containing about a pint of oil. The same potlike type of oil stove is also used in nearly all other homes as an auxiliary to save gas. It is especially useful for slow cooking at low temperatures, and for keeping hot water available for the inevitable tea.

NEWBRUNSWICK HAY CROP BIG

Fredericton, N. B., Aug. 16—Following the mid-August crop report of the New Brunswick Department of Agriculture, indicating an unusually good hay crop in this province this year and the harvesting of the crop under most favorable conditions in record time, information received through the Commercial Intelligence Service of the Department of Trade & Commerce, Ottawa, indicating a good market for New Brunswick hay in Great Britain was given out by the Provincial Agricultural Department.

The information gathered by Harrison Watson, Canadian Trade Commissioner, London, and included in the report which has been received indicates that the British hay crop is short this year but dealers in Great Britain emphasize that prices which are reasonable must be maintained and only hay of satisfactory quality can be handled.

One of the firms quoted by the Canadian Trade Commissioner writes as follows: "It does appear to us that there should be a good and assured demand for Canadian hay right through until the coming spring, providing always that the Canadian exporters are in a position to continue exportations at prices satisfactory to our English markets."

Another firm of dealers in London writes thusly: "There will no doubt be an outlet for Canadian hay here during the coming season if hay of satisfactory quality can be supplied. Unfortunately since the opening of navigation a considerable quantity of hay shipped from Canada has been of very inferior quality, a large proportion consisting of soft discolored grass and it had indeed a great effect to prejudice consumers here against Canadian hay. A number of our customers who bought Canadian hay from us, now inform us they will not touch any more unless we can undertake to give them hay of better quality."

New Crop of Swindlers Finds Public as Gullible as Ever

By W. S. COUSINS

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—It requires no special knowledge of agricultural subjects to know that the most luxuriant weeds will impose themselves on the rich soil prepared and cultivated for import.ut food crops unless they are thoroughly and persistently rooted out as soon as they show their heads above ground.

Financial and industrial parasites have had with us always: counterfeiters and crooks in the financial world; swindlers and dead-beats in business; fake stock salesmen and bucket-shop proprietors with every bull market. It is of little consequence that 500 or more of these bucket shops and fake security dealers were rooted out during the progress of the boy bull market in 1928. A new crop has been fattening off the gullible in the stock market since that time, and their activities have been such as to force the New York federal authorities to undertake a new clean-up campaign for the benefit of investors and speculators in the New York markets.

Charles H. Tuttle, the energetic federal attorney for this district, has estimated that the financial parasites, including bucket shops, tipster sheets and fake stock promotors have swindled American investors out of $100,000,000 in the last year or two. He sees a large increase in their activities in the last six months as demanded larger forces to eradicate them from the financial district. Mr. Tuttle estimates that his figure is a $25,000,000 loss through these swindling concerns and some others.

It seems incredible that in these days of enlightment in financial matters, with newspapers, bankers, financial magazines and economic agencies spreading the gospel of conservatism in investment and speculation, so many normally intelligent people fall victims of the confidence game.

If these same investors were asked by a stranger to turn over a sum of from $500 to $5,000 or more for the purchase of a suit of clothes or an automobile or a house or some other desirable commodity of whose existence they possessed only vague knowledge, they would have no more thought of complying than of attempting to fly to the moon. Only the application of a lack of ordinary intelligence could induce a confidence man to suggest such a course to any one fortunate enough to possess such a sum of money not otherwise tied down.

Yet in many of our financial centers today speculators are closing their eyes to the danger signs painted in bright red along the financial highways and placing their hard-earned funds into the hands of unscrupulous promotors, to be fleeced to the last penny.

Changing conditions in finance and investment provide a fertile field for the security swindlers and it is along these lines that many new and ingenious fakes have been so successfully operated in the last few months. The success of the high pressure forecasting bureaus, of which there are a few in the country, has suggested a profitable line of operation for the swindle sheets, which not only steal the thunder of the reliable bureaus, but after gaining the confidence of the gullible stock trade, they induce him to purchase some of their worthless wares, or to exchange good stocks for their cheap imitation.

The method is somewhat as follows: The proprietor of the fake tipster sheet, floating along with the tide, begins his operations by "recommending" only the highest grade stocks like U. S. Steel, New York Central and A. T. T., together with a few fairly prosperous industrials. He does not continue the spectacular upward moves then in progress, as soon as he is able to say to his clients "I told you so," and "I made money for you," he is ready for his fine work.

He then commences in the offering and recommending of a list of worthless stocks either directly, or through the columns of his sheet. The sucker is invited to buy for enormous profits, rivalling the boom performances of the sky-flyers on the stock exchanges and in many cases he is willing to take a chance on the actual delivery of the stock purchased. Usually, however, he is content with the profits which he allows to accumulate in the hands of the promotors who have already piloted them to tidy profits. He bites and is bitten, to the extent of every penny put into the swindle pot. In many cases he does not receive even the gratification of the worthlessness of the stock, as the promotors having decamped as soon as they have deposited his check.

State and Federal laws have both been enacted in the effort of both put into the prohibition against bucket shops and fake security sheets since the boy bull market of 1925. It is a rough-going for the financial faker, and only those who blind their own eyes to the warnings of the security mountebank are being shorn of their profits at this time. The state and federal authorities with the aid of the newspapers, are again sounding the warning against bucket shops and fake stock recommendation sheets, and telling spectators as plainly as possible that they must be on their guard.

Steel Is Laid to Manitoba Mine

Winnipeg, Man., Aug 16—T'e last piece of steel has been laid on the branch line to the Sherritt Gordon, the huge copper-zinc mine in northern Manitoba. The completion of this new branch has been rushed to enable mine operators to get their heavy machinery into the property so that installation may proceed during the winter months. Ballast gangs are now giving the line the first lift of gravel and with continuing good weather conditions it is expected that the line will be turned over to the Canadian National Railways for operation early this fall

At the neighboring Flin Flon property the Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Company is rapidly proceeding with its extensive development work, according to the natural resources department of the Canadian National Railways Underground operations at Flin Flon are at present being centered on the sinking of the main five-compartment shaft. The branch line to this property was completed last month.

WOOL MEN SEEK HELP FROM U. S. FARM BOARD

Officials of the National Wool Marketing Council and of other wool marketing organizations have had several conferences with the Federal Farm Board. They asked for the immediate formation of a commodity advisory committee for wool, and discussed specifically the question of financial aid to wool co-operatives by the Board

It developed in the conference that of this year's clip of about 300,000,000 pounds some 20,000,000 pounds are handled by members of the National Wool Marketing Council, about 7,000,000 pounds by co-operatives who are not members of the council, about 35,000,000 pounds by farmer owned warehouse companies in Texas, California and New Mexico, and about 5,000,000 by local co-operatives pools in western states. This total of about 70,000,000 pounds or 35 per cent of the total wool clip of the nation, represents the potential wool which might be handled by co-operative marketing associations.

It is apparent, therefore, that the major problems confronting the wool associations is a need for the co-ordination of their selling efforts in order to improve this situation, it was agreed that sometime early in September a meeting be called which would invite all producers'co-operative wool marketing associations in the country to meet together and all producer-owned warehouse associations, to meet it in Chicago for the purpose of discussing and if possible, developing definite plans for a national co-operative wool sales agency which shall include in its membership all of the various types of wool co-operatives now engaged in handling the product.

It was further agreed that out of the group of wool associations which participate in the Chicago meeting, the board will at that time appoint a committee of a wool advisory committee.

The National Wool Marketing Council is a trade federation of wool co-operatives. Its membership consists of the Ohio Wool Growers Co-operative Association, the Pacific Co-operative Wool Growers, the New York State Sheep Growers Co-operative Association, the Wyoming Wool Co-operative Marketing Association, the Montana Wool Growers Co-operative Marketing Association, the Utah Wool Marketing Association, the Idaho Wool Growers, the Minnesota Co-operative Wool Growers Association.

There are other co-operatives and wool pools in Nevada, South Dakota, North Dakota, Colorado, Iowa, and Kansas, which are not today affiliated with the council, and there are many producer-owned warehouse companies in various states which operate independently in storage and sales

It was the opinion of the wool co-operatives that the function of the board that all of these wool co-operatives should find a way to co-ordinate their selling effort, and with this opinion the board agrees. Among those who participated in the conference with the board were R. D. Parker of Utah; J. F. Walker of Ohio; J. B. Wilson of Wyoming; R. A. Ward of Oregon, F. B. Marshall and J. A. Hooper of Utah; Senator Thomas of Idaho; and Mr. O'Daniels of Texas.

EMPLOYMENT UP 20 P. C.

Alfred Marchev, president of Temple Corporation, stated today that the sales organization of his company had been increased to more than 3000 dealers and 70 jobbers throughout the United States.

Among the new jobbers that have been added to the Temple list are Wisconsin Auto Supply Co. of Wausau, Wis.; Manes Radio Corporation of Baltimore, Md.; Broom Distributing Co. of Binghamton, N. Y.; Johnson Ferrill of Louisville, Ky., and Henry L. Walker of Detroit

Temple employes have been increased by 20 per cent in the last two weeks, and the present hundred men are to be doubled in the 30 to 60 days, according to Mr. Marchev. This is to meet the increasing demand for Temple radio sets and speakers

F. & W. Grand Profits 43 Per Cent Larger

F. & W. Grand Stores for the six months ended June 30, 1929, reports net profit of $523,831 after all charges and taxes, equal to $1 65 a share earned on the 298,532 shares of common stock outstanding. This compares with net profit of $365,045 reported for the same period last year, equal to $1 17 a share on the same amount of stock.

For the first half of 1929 net profits increased 43 5 per cent, whereas sales for the same period increased 42 6 per cent, indicating a larger margin of profit.

For Sale Signs Hung Up on Woolen Mill

"For sale" signs have been posted on the American Woolen Co. plant at Tilton, N. H., and residents have given up hopes that clothing making in the upstate mill will be resumed. The plant was purchased by the American Woolen Co. several years ago and the most modern of machinery was installed. It has been inactive for two years.

BIG INCREASE IN DEMAND FOR U. S. PUMPS

A marked increase in foreign demand for American pumping equipment is shown for the first six months of 1929 according to information from I. J. Cochrane, Industrial Machinery Division, Department of Commerce. Exports during this period amounted to more than $34,000, representing an increase of $1,482,000 or 82 per cent over the corresponding period of the previous year.

The demand for rotary pumps, especially, has risen quite sharply, and while the domestic still sustains sales of this item through June of this year has been over four times the volume attained during the same part of 1928. Centrifugal pumps and reciprocating steam pumps have also shared in the general increase and each sales have more than doubled within the last few months.

Among the principal markets for American pumping equipment, Canada with its widespread oil distribution, mining and lumbering enterprises, is far in the lead, and in 1928 accounted for nearly 17 per cent of the total exports. Thus far sales to Canada have decreased somewhat, but in 1928 they slightly more than doubled those of 1927.

The Mexican petroleum and mining industries require a considerable amount of pumping gear, and in 1928 Mexican sales to Mexico exceeded $250,000. However, while this country has been buying heavily it will again lower the present year it fell considerably short of the volume attained in the year 1928.

Argentina has proven a steadily expanding market for American equipment of this type and during 1928 increased its purchases by nearly $58,000 over 1927. Sales to that country are decreasing in 1926 rose substantially in 1927 and exceeded $430000 for 1928.

Despite the fact that Netherlands West Indies during 1928 rose remarkably over preceding years and were nearly four times greater than in 1927. This gain was due partly to the construction of new refineries at Curacao and Aruba and the extensive development in the Maracaibo oil fields. It is expected that equipment destined for Venezuela is sometimes transshipped to Netherlands West Indies for the fact that but is shown in American export statistics as being consigned to the Netherlands West Indies.

Purchases by the United Kingdom declined from the large volume reached in 1927 but were considerably in excess of the figures for the preceding two years. A growing demand in 1927 but Russia was indicated by the fact that exports to that country in 1928 were considerably more than three times greater than in 1927, and exceeded those for 1926 by an even wider margin

ETHYL PRICES REDUCED

Ethyl Gasoline Corp., owned jointly by General Motors Corp. and Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, has increased the anti-knock standard of Ethyl gasoline and decreased cost of Ethyl fluid to refiners. Approximately 50 leading refiners in the United States and Canada are affected

Under the new price basis lead is sold at 2½ cents per c.c. or 3½ cents per cubic centimeter, a 20 per cent reduction, while gallonage charge has been reduced to 0.5 of a cent, a decrease of about 14 per cent Minimum cost to refiners for Ethyl gasoline of 3 c.c. Ethyl standard on the new basis will be one cent, while the maximum of three cents per gallon to a gallon will be 18 cents

Consumption of Ethyl gasoline in 1929, the company states, will increase approximately 50 per cent over 1928, reaching about 1,145,000,000 gallons, against 575 million last year. Nearly 90 per cent of gasoline used in the United States is now treated with Ethyl fluid which, when added to ordinary gasoline, forms Ethyl gasoline

Allied Chemical's Steel Investment

STOCKHOLDERS of United States Steel this week will receive an extraordinary profit as a result of Allied Chemical. The latter has recently declared the extraordinary dividend of one share of U. S. Steel common stock but at the time it was known to exceed $100 a share. The stock declaration has since been received and it is now known that the original investment was enlarged. It appears that Allied's holdings of Steel approximate 150,000 shares, the profit should be commensurate, figured today at $15,000,000. This is not a large investment shows a profit to Allied of $15,000,000. Steel common is a huge investment trust, in addition to a substantial and diversified list which ranks in size and profits with Union Carbide and the dollar enterprises A list of specific issues which I think in the near future may become one of the most spectacular performers on the present list.

SPOILED YOUNG MEN -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Cause Modern Girls Many a Sad Heartache

"She gives and gives, more girls whenever she feels like it," he says, if I so much as look at another man he will drop me. A moment she altogether ... Emma ... her chum a week or two ago, just to prove her independence. Blake recently entertained two old friends from her home town ... she formerly went to school with.

"Oddish?" Of ...

But what are ... wails Elsie. ... are all like ... last nowadays.

When Jack wants a date ... calls up Betty at the last moment and is furious if she has another engagement for the evening. So poor Betty sacrifices her plan for a theater party with the family or a bridesmaid's shower, or any other absorbing good time she may have planned for the evening and goes out with Jack, rather than allow him by refusing his last ... situation.

Jack races up to her house in his roadster and honks the horn impatiently until Betty comes running out in a flurry of haste.

What's the big idea?" demands Jack. "I've been waiting for five minutes. Think I have nothing else to do?"

All the evening Jack monopolizes the manner of one conferring a great favor by bestowing on Betty the pleasure of his society, and he gives her to understand that if she doesn't appreciate him there are plenty of other girls who will.

Once in a while ... girl who ... he meets a new ... for herself ... and ... a ... to the ... to the ... parties ... he feels ... and then ... the subject ... these ... girls assumes that ... not all she should be.

Billy evidently believes that taxi ... were intended for necking. From the time she steps into the door, he keeps ... ing over to Claire, or Charlotte or Janet or whoever the girl may be, until she is in the far corner and hasn't a chance to escape. Whenever the car ... hits over a bump in the road he makes it an excuse to catch her in his arms and finally, he ... knows he whether or not she is willing.

Jack is as handsome ... a movie star and a clever athlete. But he doesn't ... enough consideration to ... his manners ... and drinks very audibly, indeed, devours everything on the menu ... is great ... is enraged if the waiter makes a mistake with the food ... and sulks when his companions suggest an order that is not his own first choice.

The point is undeniable. The young girl ... dinner who ... for men and dotes ... from up ... the phone ... mouth ... the girl who is too weak to object ... rich vulgarities of shrieks and ... buchs when she is secretly ... bored. The natural attraction of men toward women is so great that girls, by exercising self-restraint and reserve, and holding to high standards, can exert a tremendous influence over men and sway them toward courtesy, fairness, generosity and self-control.

Every worth-while girl in her heart prefers a man with high standards, who tries to be true to his ... in spite of ... ... ridicule, jokes and ignorance called ... a girl might ... since a young man who ... is usually ... to ... that ... fastidious ... for her principles ... companions and ... attention.

CORRECT MANNERS

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

We have a little girl three years old and my husband wishes to teach her to answer us with "Yes, Ma'am," and "Yes, Ma'am." I will not agree with me that it is better form to say, "Yes, Daddy," and "Yes, Mother," just "Yes." Also he thinks she should say "Yes, Ma'am" and "Yes, Sir" to grown-ups who visit us, while I think she should say "Yes," or "Yes, Mrs. Brady."

2. When a woman of 33 talks to a woman of 55, should the younger woman answer the older with "Yes, Ma'am," or should she say, "Yes," or "Yes, Mrs. Smith"

3. It is my opinion that only servants should say "Yes, Ma'am." Or anyone who serves in business I will thank you to advise us.

CHARLOTTE

I AGREE with you that it is better for the child to be taught to say "Yes, Mother," or "Yes, Daddy," or "No, Father," than to use the worn out form of "Yes, Ma'am" or "Yes, Sir." It sounds better, and the fact that the title is specifically named—Mother, Father—gives it a more personal sound.

The use of the names of the grown-ups is, I agree again, better, and, too, pleases the grown-ups, just as the use of a person's name when we acknowledge an introduction—"How do you do, Mrs Brady"—pleases the other person.

I hope that you can convince your husband that, although of course it is perfectly correct for the little daughter to say what he suggests, "Yes, Ma'am" and "Yes, Sir," this form of answer is old-fashioned and out-dated and the use of the title or name is vastly more interesting and gracious.

2. She should say "Yes," or, better "Yes, Mrs Smith

3. You are right.

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN

I have been ... correspondence for some time with a young man in college. He will be graduated next month and I am wondering if I should send a gift." He sent me a lovely Christmas gift. B. R.

YES, it would be kind and proper for you to send this young man a graduation present. A well-chosen book is the perfect present for this occasion.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

1. I have received a wedding invitation from a very dear friend. Although we have seen very little of each other for two years, we have corresponded constantly. My fiance, whom she has never met, she did not invite to the wedding. I feel hurt, and, consequently, have declined the invitation, which I would gladly have accepted had he been invited. Do you think that I am justified?

2. Is my stationery correct, also the form of my letter and my handwriting? I would appreciate very much any suggestions from you.

G. J. C.

I COULDN'T pass judgment on this until I knew what kind of wedding your friend has planned and how many friends she was inviting to the wedding. She may have had, by force of circumstances, to limit her invitation list, and so could not include all the people that she wished to. Please, dear lady, do not do anything foolish to spoil your friendship with this girl until you know whether or not she could have extended her list.

2. Your letter paper is excellent, your handwriting is full of character and charmingly legible, and your letter form is perfect. NOW aren't you proud? Anyone who writes such a fine letter, and of such artistic appearance, may well be.

Edith of Somerville. During the ceremony it seems to me that he should give all the necessary attention to the bridesmaid. After that he can do as he chooses.

Make Child Love Home

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

VIVIAN and Pauline and John stood about, staring and commenting once in a while because there was a visitor. After a few moments, the novelty wore off to the extent of their resuming their play, though the activities somehow just had to be in the room with mother and the strange lady.

"I certainly will be glad when vacation is over," sighed the mother. "Children are all right, but it is a relief when you know they're safe in school and out of the way."

The children paused for a second and eyed her gravely.

The mother knows what she means. You and I know, too, but children have not yet acquired that discrimination between the verbal statement and our exact meaning underneath the words that takes the sting out of hearing what "a nuisance" they are.

Let us so arrange our lives that the children will fit. Let them share the household duties, the daily responsibilities, so that we shall never feel they are in the way. It is only when parents and children's interests so widely diverge that they become alien to each other that one impedes the other at all. When we attain that perfect unity of family life for which we are all striving, then we shall no longer even think the terrible thought of "in the way" about the little people.

Why bring it to a child's mind that he is in the way, or that he deprives his parents of any good things because of his being alive? He didn't ask to be born. Be grateful you have him and make him welcome. Homes of all places should make us feel that we are loved and wanted and welcome.

CRABMEAT AND TOMATO JELLY SALAD

In a salad bowl lined with lettuce leaves, arrange separate piles of ½ lb crabmeat, ½ hard-boiled eggs chopped fine, silver knife so whites will not discolor, 2 roots celery cut in ½ inch pieces cut in small pieces and tomato jelly cut in cubes. Between piles place ... green pepper free from seeds and cut in strips. Make a nest of heart leaves of lettuce in center and fill with mayonnaise dressing.

The salad ingredients may be mixed lightly together when salad is being served, or only those ingredient that are desired may be served to each person.

This Day in Our History

ON August 16, 1812, Gen. William Hull surrendered Detroit to the British without firing a shot and without consulting his officers. Two years later Hull was found guilty of treason. Instances of treason during the Revolutionary War were few, Benedict Arnold being an exception.

The country glides quietly past the window. The third night we reach Herstal. I hear that Albert is to be put off at the next station of his fever. "How far does the train go?" I ask.

"To Cologne."

"Albert," I say, "we stick together; you see."

On the nurse's next round I hold my breath and press it up into my head. My face swells and turns red. She stops. "Are you in pain?" "Yes," I groan, "all of a sudden."

She gives me a thermometer and goes on. I would not have been under Kat's tuition if I did not know what to do now. These army thermometers are not made for old soldiers. All one has to do is to drive the quicksilver up and then it stays there without falling again.

Mercury Up

I stick the thermometer under my arm at a slant, and flip it steadily with my forefinger. Then I give it a shake. I send it up to 100.2 degrees. But that is not enough. A match held cautiously near to it brings it up to 101.6 degrees.

As the nurse comes back, I blow myself out, breathe in short gasps, goggle at her with vacant eyes, toss about restlessly, and mutter in a whisper: "I can't bear it any longer——"

She notes me down on a slip of paper. I know perfectly well my plaster bandage will not be re-opened if it can be avoided.

Albert and I are put off together.

We are in the same room in a Catholic Hospital. That is a piece of luck, the Catholic infirmaries are noted for their good treatment and good food. The hospital has been filled up from our train, there are a great many bad cases amongst them.

We do not get examined today because there are too few surgeons. The flat trolleys with the rubber wheels pass continually along the corridor, and always with someone stretched at full length upon them. A damnable position, stretched out at full length like that;—the only time it is good is when one is asleep.

The night is very disturbed. No one can sleep. Toward morning we doze a little. I wake up just as it grows light. The door stands open and I hear voices from the corridor. The others wake up too. There are murmurings in the corridor. It disturbs me and some of the others.

I feel savage, and say: "I'm going to count up to three. If it doesn't stop before then I'll let something fly."

"Me, too," says another.

I count up to five. Then I take hold of a bottle, aim, and heave it through the door into the corridor. It smashes into a thousand pieces.

Inspection On

At noon the hospital inspector arrives and abuses us. He threatens us with clink and all the rest of it. But a hospital inspector is just the same as a commissariat inspector, or anyone else who wears a long dagger and shoulder straps, but is really a clerk, and is never considered even by a recruit as a real officer. So we let him talk. What can they do to us, any way——

"Who threw the bottle?" he asks.

Before I can think whether I should report myself, someone says: "I did."

"You?"

"Yes. I was annoyed because we were waked up and lost my sense so that I did not know what I was doing."

He talks like a book.

"What is your name?"

"Reinforcement-Reservist Josef Hamacher."

The inspector departs.

We are all curious. "But why did you say you did it? It wasn't you at all!"

He grins, "That doesn't matter. I have a shooting license."

Then, of course, we all understand. Whoever has a shooting license can do just whatever he pleases.

"Yes," he explains, "I got a crack in the head and they presented me with a certificate to say that I was periodically not responsible for my actions. Ever since then I've had a grand time. No one dares to annoy me. And nobody does anything to me.

Soundless Trollies

Then come the soundless, flat trollies to take us away.

The bandages are stuck fast. We bellow like steers.

There are eight men in our room. Peter, a curly black-haired fellow, has the worst injury;—a severe lung wound. Franz Wachter, alongside him, has a shot in the arm which didn't look too bad at first. But the third night he calls out to us, telling us to ring, he thinks he has a hemorrhage.

I ring loudly. The night nurse does not come. We have been asking rather heavy demands on her during the night, because we have all been freshly bandaged, and so have a good deal of pain.

One wants his leg placed so, another so, a third wants water, a fourth wants her to shake up his pillow;—in the end the buxom old body grumbled hat-temperedly and slammed the doors. Now no doubt she thinks it is something of the same sort and so she is not coming.

We wait. Then Franz says: "Ring again."

I do so. Still she does not put in an appearance. In our wing there is only one night nurse, perhaps she has something to do in one of the other rooms. "Franz, are you quite sure you are bleeding?" I ask.

Bandage Wet

"The bandage is wet. Can't anybody make a light?"

That cannot be done either. The switch is by the door and none of us can stand up. I hold my thumb against the button of the bell till it becomes numb. Perhaps the nurse has fallen asleep.

At last the door opens. The old lady appears, mumbling. When she perceives Franz's trouble she begins to bustle, and says: "Why did not someone say I was wanted?"

"We did ring. And none of us here can walk."

He had been bleeding badly and she binds him up. In the morning we look at his face, it has become sharp and yellow, whereas the evening before he looked almost healthy. Now a nurse comes oftener.

FOREST LOVE by Hazel Livingston

CHAPTER 49

A MAN was crawling up the cliff. He was creeping slowly but surely toward Anita. Jack Beamer watched him, with curious, detached attention. Into his aching head crept the conviction that the men had been everything, that he had been watching them for a long time. He thought, "I should go to help him—it would look better." But he continued to sit on the ledge mopping his hot face.

The man was a ranger. A tall, thin fellow with long arms and legs. He climbed like a monkey. From time to time he shouted encouragement to Anita . . . as if she could hear, as if she would ever want encouragement again.

The thought of Anita, dead at last, made Jack smile. He didn't know why, not because he felt particularly happy about it. He had never wanted anything like this. Damn it, why couldn't she have died naturally, as the doctors promised? Damn quickly, saying she had a weak heart. . . . This would look bad for him. He'd have to get down there somehow, say something . . .

"Haloo . . . Halooo!" he called, waving the handkerchief.

The man had reached the rock on which Anita lay. He stopped for a moment and waved a hand in some sort of signal, in answer to Jack's call.

There was something comforting about it. Jack began to feel more like himself. Cupping his mouth with his hands he shouted, "I can't get down there." And after a moment. "She fell. Is she . . . dead?"

The ranger did not answer. He had straightened the woman's crumpled body, and was bending over her as if listening for a sign of life. Jack watched, fascinated. "Is she dead?" Jack shouted again.

"The bushes broke the fall. I don't know how bad off she is, though. Have you got a rope up there?"

"There was one on the horse." He forgot that the horses had been left a quarter of a mile below.

Anita wasn't dead. Maybe she'd get well? He turned the new idea over in his head. What was going on down there? She was stirring. The man gave her a drink out of his canteen. They were talking. Talking . . . he didn't like that . . . that fellow had no business to butt in . . .

He was coming on up the cliff now, climbing steadily toward the ledge . . . Jack shut his eyes for a moment. It made him dizzy to watch.

When he opened them Anita had struggled to a sitting position. He saw that her head was bleeding. She lifted one skinny arm. "He did it!" she screamed. "He tried to kill me"

"My God!" he whispered. "She can't say that! Why . . . why . . ." And he screamed back to her, "You damn liar . . . you . . . you miserable HAG!" His voice broke, frightening him. Hysterical. Sounded guilty. Must stop that.

"Give us a hand," the man commanded, ignoring his words.

Jack extended one limp hand over the bank. "She's been out of her head ever since we got here. I've been afraid of suicide from the first. She leaped off that rock, believe it or not——"

"I'm all right, I don't need any advice from you!" But he braced one hand against the cliff and was giving his hand of it. It was a blow that again when Anita recommenced that thin, shrill screaming.

"Help . . . oh, help! . . . he tried to kill me . . . he threw me . . ."

But Jack couldn't stop shaking. Somehow the ranger made the ledge without his aid. "I tell you I'm innocent!" he shouted, in a rage because he couldn't stop that senseless shaking. "The woman is out of her head, I tell you. If you think——"

The ranger stooped to fasten a bootlace. "I'm not thinking, my friend," he said wearily. "I'm not the judge. But you better shut up. The less I know about this the better it's going to be for you. Now where's the——"

He was going to ask "Where's the rope?" But he never finished. Jack Beamer's fist found the point of his jaw. It was a blow that would have felled an ox. The ranger staggered backward. His clutching fingers fastened on a clump of grass. It did not hold.

This time Jack did not wait. Swung his back on his victims, he ran.

"Funny those folks didn't come back."

All the other horses were in. No one else had stayed out in the storm. Palmer didn't like it. "Where'd they say they were going?" he questioned the boy who had started them off.

"They didn't say."

"How many times have I told you to ask EVERYBODY? Now how do I know where the dum fools went?"

Jack MacKimmons, the ranger from Gales Flat who had stopped at the lodge for lunch, and to wait until the storm passed, grinned.

"Oh, they'll turn up like all the rest. But I'll keep an eye out as I go through the canyon. I supposed you warned them to keep off the upper road?"

"Oh, sure. Warned everybody. Say, you don't think the storm . . ."

"NUTS! Nobody ever gets hit! Worse they'd get would be a good soaking. Well, so long Slim, I'll telephone you if I find remains!"

"Darn the remains. Look out for my horses. He picked the two best I got!"

MacKimmons rode out laughing. He was late, and his horse was rested. They made time galloping over the trails both knew so well. Before he had gone a mile he had completely forgotten Slim and his lost tourists.

In the canyon, beside a little bridge he had to cross he came upon the lifeless body of a heavy man. He lay with his face in the gravel, not five feet from his dead mount.

MacKimmons gulped. Blood made him sick. But there was nothing to do but face it. He tied his snorting horse to a tree, and climbed over the bridge, and across the shallow clear little stream to the gravel bank where the man lay.

With an effort he turned over the body. Yes, it was Slim's tourist all right. He must have gone right off the cliff on the horse. Funny Slim let go off . . . one stretch of decent trail on the high road . . .

Whistling to keep up his courage MacKimmons, felt in the pockets for identification. A pigskin wallet stuffed with bills bore inside the flap "John Herbert Beamer," in small gold letters.

Well, I guess you've taken your last ride, young feller," MacKimmons murmured. With all his heart he wished Decatur were with him. He didn't like handling things like this alone. He guessed he'd better leave everything as it was, and get on to the next telephone to report. He wouldn't do much harm to the other body like as not the woman got into trouble, too without Decatur. They would come back with lanterns.

"Get along there!" He dug his heels into the horse's sides, and galloped on down the trail. It was getting darker every moment. "Wish old Decatur was around."

Roger was never more than he knew. He lay in a little gully not far from the river, with columbine tangled in his yellow hair, and dust in his open mouth.

Scheming Amy -:- An Interesting Short Story by Laura Cooley Hamil

HER battle with the icy wind blowing down Michigan ave. brought Amy Rogers to a sudden stop in the lee of the buildings. On the pretext of looking into a shop window she inspected her reflection. Not too badly damaged. So far as she could detect, no actual evidence of the fight with the wind.

It was a morning when she must look her best, for she had a most important engagement at the Blackstone, for which she was arriving a bit early and by train and a walk from the station instead of by taxi.

Amy was not particularly thrifty. Amy was merely broke and the interview had to alter her status. She was determined on that.

Inside the hotel she waited, watching the other women while apparently idling over a book she had brought with her. She went over the arguments by which she had forced herself to this moment. For if she were not mistaken, and in matters of proposals Amy was not altogether inexperienced, she would be able to go away from this luncheon with Georgie's heart and hand in her keeping.

Georgie was backward and naive, but he was deeply in love, and brave as a lion for the time being. Last night had brought the thing to a focus and Georgie to a proposal, but some inhibition of cowardice—for she did not love him—or a wish to play with the idea a few hours longer before committing herself, had led Amy to put off deciding.

That Georgie was determined to be put out of his misery she was sure. Knew too, that it was unthinkable that a girl in her sense would refuse this chance. Refuse a rope to pull her on a sure footing, something she had dreamed of through the precarious stretch of her precarious career.

Amy was not a star, probably never would be. Her stage career had been a long dull grind, and this last lay-off made things more desperate than usual. Georgie timely attention had been a godsend. This invitation to lunch with him was pure joy. Last night's dinner at the club as welcome. At night, the old question remained. Continually in her ears it sounded.

"And Andy?"

There it was again. Andy! whose path crossed hers once a year or thereabouts. Andy! whose lighthearteedness made the weeks merry that they had together, now and then. Once they had been engaged to be married. They joked about it now, but with an undercurrent of seriousness that would not be denied.

The thought of matrimony had daunted them both, stage people that they were and small-time artists whose acts could not combine or his support them. So she had put him out of her mind and thrown herself into this intimacy with Georgie and his friends, determined to forget. She had succeeded, one would have supposed.

Beginning to be conscious of delay, of tardiness, Amy looked at her watch and felt a sudden panic. Would Georgie fail her? He was so safe, so sure, so affluent. The little things she did not like about him were as nothing by comparison with his infallibility. She ought fail but Georgie would not fail her.

So she was taken back for a moment when she was addressed by Andy Weston, here unexpectedly and out of season. A prosperous, handsome Andy who swept her with him, protesting, and ordered a table.

"For three if you insist but my engagement takes precedence of Georgie's. How marvelous you're looking! And how are tricks? Not so good, Madline tells me."

Ah, Madeline! A chatterbox. But even Madeline's interpretation could not do away with Georgie's ring waiting only for her acceptance. She smiled the sure little smile that women keep for putting a man in his place, and said exactly nothing. For she wanted no arguments, explanation. Least of all from Andy. She had won her own approval by too hard a struggle to risk argument.

Then reluctantly, for he read her like a book, but firmly because he loved her, Andy Weston told her the one thing that could have lessened her chagrin. For Georgie, strangely, did not come and she had no wanted to close the matter. Quickly, before her heart failed her.

Dubois wired for me, Amy, and he sent a message to you when I talked with him this morning. He needs a new cast and wants us both. Your salary—I took it on myself to settle that. I knew you would come back with me."

In her excitement Amy reacted to him exactly as always and squeezed his hand happily before she remembered Georgie. Without moving she studied a moment. Why not? Why do the thing she found so hard when the old free comradeship beckoned? The first glamour was gone from stage life but she had worked long and hard, and this would be recognition. Why scorn the thing she had earned, when Georgie bored her anyway?

As easily as that the matter was settled. She went with Andy to see the contracts and dreamed that among the items of stage gossip with Andy, Dubois had added this:

"Get Amy Rogers for me, will you? I never see her any more except with young Georgie Sands. At cock, that fellow will think he is genuine and he has fooled dozens. Marry? Not Georgie!"

On a chance Andy had tried the Blackstone, knowing Georgie's haunts. Had seen him leaving with the new star at the Illinois—and Amy waiting. Being a gentleman, Andy was saying nothing of all that or needed to. For the lure of the work she loved was enough had to spare. Amy's guardian angel was still on the job.

Three-Minute Journeys Abroad -:- By Temple Manning

THERE are a number of outstanding points of interest in the city of Cairo, and chief among these is the Citadel. It is situated on the heights to the east of the city—the heights are known as the Mokattam cliffs—and from this vantage point one may get a superb view and conception of the city.

The Citadel proper took 30 years to build. Most of the stone of which it was constructed came from the smaller pyramids at Gizeh.

As one stands on the cliffs, the oldest portion of the city is in the foreground. Just at the foot of the hill—as one looks westward—are two famous mosques, the Rifalyah mosque and the mosque of Sultan Hassan. Back of the mosques is the native city with its narrow, crooked streets, and still further in the background is the modern city of Cairo. On the west side of the Nile one can discern a narrow fertile strip of green land and far on the horizon, the pyramids of Gizeh. South of these pyramids can be seen other, smaller masses of stone.

The mosque of Sultan Hassan which is, as I said, just below the Citadel, is one of the most imposing mosques in existence. The entrance is 85 feet high while the mausoleum has a dome 150 feet high. The south minaret, rising 285 feet, is the highest in Cairo. One feels the spirit of old Cairo as one enters this mosque. Through the small windows comes a soft light, making the whole place seem mysterious. The bronze pulpit door is decorated with gold and silver work while the elaborate frieze, fountain and other items of adornment are unusually fine examples of Arabic work. Behind the altar in the holy of holies is the noble tomb holding the sarcophagus or stone casket of Hassan.

The Mosque of Mohammed Ali, or the "alabaster mosque," is on the heights near the Citadel. It is not as good an example of Egyptian architecture as the Hassan mosque, for it is 500 years "younger." Its interior finish is more elaborate and ornate and rich in arabesques and decorative detail, but much of the marble is of a poor quality.

The third building one should not fail to see is the Egyptian Museum not far from the Nile bridge. This houses a wonderful collection of Greek and Egyptian antiques—perhaps the most complete and valuable collection of these items in the world. The structure itself is a beautiful piece of architecture. Built in 1897, it was done in a Greco-Roman style at a cost of over a million dollars. Automatically it has received most of the treasures which have been unearthed in the excavations throughout Egypt. The various articles found in the tomb of Tutankh-Amen as well as an extensive collection of mummies, are on display.

One more spot and we shall leave Cairo for today.

The Al Azhar mosque, founded in 970, has been turned into a school for Mohammedan students. If one visits the school during the morning hours, one may see these students at their studies. Some will be assiduously reading the Koran while others will be grouped around an instructor. Preparatory studies include grammar, rhetoric logic, poetics, arithmetic, writing, with higher courses in jurisprudence theology and a minute study of the Koran. The complete curriculum takes 17 years, although most of the students do not remain so long. The students learn by slavish memorizing.

A visit to the school while the students are studying is an interesting sight and one which you should not miss.

Originality Shown in Speech

By LUCY LOWELL.

YOU hear it affirmed that there is a broad streak of sheep in humankind.

Some bellwether, more independent of mentality than his fellows, leads a path. The others follow pell-mell, content to scamper along the trail just so it requires a minimum of effort, no originality, no outlay of thought.

No question but this is true for the most part. And it is especially true concerning speech — adjectives.

Why does a storm at sea always roll up "mountainous" waves? Why does a ship always ride "lumbering into port" from such a storm?

Why is a feminine child always a "dear little girl?" Or a woman advanced in years a "dear old lady?"

Why is a garment a woman happens to like always a "little" dress, a "little" hat? Why is anything made of chiffon always a "little" chiffon?

Why do novelists write of girls with "heart-shaped" faces? Why do their heroes have wavy hair which they vainly try to keep smooth?

Why do prisons always have "grim, gray walls? Have you ever seen a penitentiary with gray walls?

Why is a hospital not always described as "white"? By virtue of the fact that 90 per cent of all bed linen is uncolored, is not any cot, bed, berth or what have you, white?

Why is a judge always "stern" never merely grouchy? Why is a cop never anything but "burly?"

It is time, one would think, that someone discovered a new set of adjectives. Whoever might have been the bellwether to discover that waves roll mountains high (which they never do) and that chiffon is always little (which it seldom is) we have been following in his sheep trail long enough, it seems to me.

BOSTON HEARS FIRE BOAT ORDERS

By FRED TOYE
Radio Editor

Radio listeners living in the Back Bay and downtown Boston frequently hear this call while tuning in stations in the lower notches on the dial.

Within the past few months these mysterious conversations have poured through loud speakers with somewhat surprising abruptness and volume.

WEEI doesn't find its activities listed in the radio program columns of the daily newspapers, yet it is one of the most important broadcast stations in the New England States. Without doubt, the time will come when listeners will be treated suddenly to an impromptu radio broadcast from WEY which will have all the elements of adventure, romance, suspense and heroism that the best of our novelists strive for, but which often reach their most thrilling heights in real life.

Station WEY, "maintained and operated by the fire department of the City of Boston," to use the cant of the studio, is on the job 24 hours a day, vigilant to protect the lives and property and commerce of Boston. It is an integral part of the amazingly ingenious fire signalling system of that great area of the city's peace-time defense.

Its particular purpose is to provide instantaneous communication with the three Boston fire boats, Engines 31, 44 and 47 which protect Boston's valuable waterfront. Obviously, when a fire boat has left its moorings at North End Park or at the South Fort Point Channel or at the South Ferry, its skipper and crew would be out of touch with district chiefs and headquarters except for radio. The customary ship-to-shore code system of communication is poorly adapted to the swift and hasty orders and quick maneuvers such as fire-fighting involves. Consequently, Fire Department officials have worked out a combination of code and verbal broadcast, by means of which it is possible for the fire signal headquarters to talk with any or all of the fire boats without interfering with the automatic transmission of alarms sent via short wave.

WEY's new transmitter is installed in a central position in the main signal room at fire headquarters in the Fenway. It was built according to plans worked out by Operator James A. McCarron, who is a radio amateur of 22 years experience, and who has had a hand in the radio work of the Boston Fire Department for the past five years. Operator McCarron's introduction to radio came during the service of the United States Navy.

The general public has faint realization of the amount of inconvenience which it is spared as a result of the working of the WEY transmitter. An example of the way in which WEY saves traffic tie-ups alone was pointed out today by Operator McCarron.

"On an alarm from the South Bay district, for example, eight pieces of apparatus answer the first alarm. Engine 44, the fire boat stationed at Fort Point Channel, immediately responds. This district is a dangerous one, full of lumber yards, freight houses and garages.

Law in Contempt Cases Should Be Changed

The Massachusetts law bearing upon contempt of court proceedings should be revised.

Such proceedings now are instigated by the judge of the particular court in which the alleged contempt is committed, and the same judge passes upon the guilt of the defendant and pronounces sentence, from which there is practically no appeal.

Obviously, this is an injustice in the courts of justice. A man should not be empowered to bring a charge against another man and then be the sole judge of his guilt and of his punishment as well.

Almost as logically might a district attorney, prosecuting a person for robbery, be given the power to judge that person guilty and send him to jail.

The injustice of the present arrangement is aptly illustrated by the recent so-called "Cleveland contempt case," an outgrowth of Ohio contempt laws similar to those in this State.

In Cleveland, Judge Frederick P. Walther sentenced to jail and fined two newspapermen responsible for an editorial which took him to task for his judgment in a certain dispute.

The editorial was a personal affront to Judge Walther—in that gentleman's opinion. The average man so affronted must seek redress through suit in the civil courts. Not so a judge.

Having already judged that the court's dignity—HIS DIGNITY—was offended, Judge Walther cited the men for contempt, found them guilty and sentenced them to jail, with a fine.

What Judge Walther did in Cleveland, it is within the power of any Massachusetts judge to duplicate.

Indeed, rarely a day passes in the courts of Greater Boston without one person having been adjudged in contempt and sentenced by the very judge of the court in which the contempt was committed.

True, in a large majority of these cases the judgment is just. Collectively, we feel, Massachusetts jurists have no superiors. But to argue that point in favor of the present law is as manifestly in error as to say that the district attorney, being of unblemished character, should not only prosecute but judge and sentence the alleged robber.

The Legislature should revise the law, at least to the extent of providing that contempt proceedings shall be heard before a judge other than the one sitting in the court where the offense took place.

Such revision might logically include the provision that persons found guilty of contempt in the lower court shall be given recourse to appeal and trial by jury in the superior court.

It is not likely that any such action by the Legislature will find favor with the majority of Massachusetts judges, who are naturally jealous of their power where respect for themselves and for what they represent is concerned.

But under a law so revised, the dignity of the courts would not suffer in the slightest and we would be assured that those persons found guilty of contempt would always be guilty of contempt of court and not of personalities.

Too, a condition that smacks highly of "lese majeste" on the public palate would be greatly improved in flavor.

Mule and Farmer

Some Tax Puzzles

(Copyright, 1929)

If a young man inherits a fortune and spends his time getting a nice coat of tan at Palm Beach or losing money at Monte Carlo, the Government takes a certain part of his income.

If a doctor spends his days working hard and his nights answering emergency calls, wearing himself out early, the Government takes the same percentage of his income.

If a farmer driving a mule is struck by a train and pays forty dollars to a veterinary for the mule and a hundred dollars for his own doctor's bill, the Government allows deduction for the mule, but none for the farmer.

That seems unreasonable.

New York State proposed to reduce by 25 per cent the income tax on EARNED incomes, as compared with a tax levied on UNEARNED income.

If a man owns an oil well or a coal mine he is permitted to make a deduction from his income tax because of "depletion." There is less oil in his well, less coal in his mine at the end of a year.

There is also less power in a professional man's body. Less energy in a business man's brain at the end of a year. Why shouldn't they charge for "DEPLETION" also?

We Manufacture Well

(Copyright, 1929)

In spite of high wages and high cost of living, American manufacturers can compete with the whole world when they understand their business and apply themselves to economical production. In 1928 the automobile men of this country sold to foreigners $61,529,748 worth of their products, beating the record by more than $11,000,000.

In 1928 the Lackawanna Railroad carried 1,016,000 fewer passengers than in 1927. Private automobiles and motor buses explain the drop. Gross income dropped $3,556,000.

PRIVATELY owned automobiles are bound to cut down railroad traffic. Motor buses should not be able to do so. There is no reason why a bus, using expensive tires over rough roads, should carry passengers more cheaply than railroads COULD do for short hauls on steel tracks. Only a few new ideas, plus energy, are necessary to meet that situation.

Pictures to Make Us Think

The Grave Is Deep

(Copyright, 1929)

REAL PEACE AT LAST. MARSHAL FOCH AS HE LAY DEAD, IN HIS HOUSE IN PARIS

"The boast of heraldry, the pomp of pow'r,
And all that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave,
Await alike the inevitable hour,
The path of glory leads but to the grave."

Millions of times that verse from Gray's "Elegy in a Country Churchyard" has been repeated.

But it is not true that "paths of glory lead but to the grave."

Everything in life leads to the grave. It leads also to what is BEYOND the grave.

But we do know that the paths of glory, the paths of service to other men, the paths of good work unselfishly done, DO NOT lead to the grave alone.

The path of honest service leads to esteem in the minds of men, to grateful remembrance, to all that is really worth while in THIS age.

Who can doubt that honest service, glorious work, unselfish effort here are rewarded in a better world?

Foch, the great French Marshal, head of the Allied armies, has been for months in his grave. The grave that leads to oblivion and forgetfulness for most of us, cannot shut out the glory of his name.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AND OLD CLEMENCEAU, WHO KEPT HIM A PRINCE

On one side you see the Prince of Wales, in elaborate military regalia, on his way from the great Cathedral of Notre Dame to the beautiful gold dome of the palace of the "Invalides" where the Marshal's body lies.

He and Lloyd George between them won the war.

Through the war Clemenceau stood behind Foch, and being head of the government Clemenceau was able to give to the Marshal the support that he needed.

The young Prince, in his fine uniform, probably looked on old Clemenceau that day, without realizing that but for Clemenceau he, the Prince of Wales, might be an exile from England, and a young Hohenzollern, son of the former Kaiser, might be sitting on the throne of King George.

Great power, great historical meaning in the faces of Foch who did the FIGHTING, and Clemenceau, who, with Lloyd George, did the THINKING and won the victory.

France will honor Clemenceau when he dies, as he must before many years in the natural course of events. And in honoring Clemenceau it will honor the man to whom France owes more than to any other man born within the last 100 years.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 16—Thoughts while strolling: Those bespectacled young men for whom "Life is serious, life is earnest"—or whatever it is—might have been written. Donald Meek, the actor, whose name describes his stage parts. Initials on cloche hats. Why not telephone numbers?

William Fox, a Tulchva, Hungary boy, who made good in the city. Those worldlings with puffed out chests and white crests of hair—like cockatoos. Heywood Broun's orange bright tie. Fay Marbe, who gives one person shows on Broadway. Sign: "Dental Crematorium—Cash Paid for Dental Scrap."

The new Chanin building. What a son of a gun to whitewash! Billy Emmerich, one of the town's favorite bachelors. The peanut brittle ice cream fad. That chemical spray on buildings to keep dogs away. The delicious jellies in the Woman's Exchanges. Only Broadway surface cars seem to carry passengers any more.

Bing & Bing, the contractors who bang and bank. Mullion wiz dowed tap rooms trying to carry on with near beer in leaden tankards. Those lanky women with scrawny necks who carry tennis rackets. What became of scalloped ginger cakes with white icing. Book shop offers: "Books for week-end guests."

There is the story of the fellow who wandered out of a musical show between acts on 42nd street, drifted back into the theater next door where a drama was playing. After watching for five minutes, he rushed to a taxi and told the driver to crack a few speed laws getting to the Bellevue psychopathic ward.

A large popular priced department store recently featured a second edition of Boswell's Life of Johnson at $750, a rare bargain but interesting only to collectors, of whom it attracted a large number. It was effective sales psychology. Many who had never been in the store made purchases and came back again.

Incidentally, a wealthy father has paid $800 for a Dickens chair for a daughter who had an urge to write. He thought the chair might prove an inspiration. We don't know how it came out but a rough guess is it didn't amount to that! My experience and also that of many others in the most effective inspiration to writing is an overdue board bill and a heartless landlady.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I HAVE, on my desk, a toy—a small wooden doll. It is actually not one doll, but many dolls which are nested within each other, like the wood eggs you and I played with as children.

The doll in the center is very tiny. But around that there is a larger doll—and around that still a larger one—and so on. There are in all 12 dolls within that one small toy.

I keep that toy on my desk to remind me of life—TO HELP ME STAND AND UNDERSTAND LIFE. For it is like life—our CHANGING life.

Most of us have a wrong idea of life. We think of it as a definite, fixed condition—the opposite of death. That is not so.

Life is not ONE condition, but MANY conditions, each opening into the other—the smaller into the larger. All nested within the one great program, as the little dolls in my toy are nested within the large doll.

You were alive 10 years ago. You are alive today. But, if you have developed normally, it is an entirely different aliveness. Your opinions have changed, your attitude has changed. You are still YOU, but you have assumed new dimensions. You have slipped from one husk into another—and 10 years from now you will have proceeded still further.

And with each change—

Each advancement from an old form of life to a new form of life—SOMETHING IS PUT OFF AND SOMETHING IS PUT ON. And that is not easy.

Change is never easy. Change hurts. And because it hurts we think change is wrong. We are terrified when it looms upon us. We believe that life should continue as it was, only, perhaps, be more comfortable. If life suddenly loses all its comfort—if we are bereft of loved ones, of peace or power or possessions—we conclude that black misfortune has overcome us. But it hasn't.

CHANGE—EVEN THAT CHANGE WHICH CAUSES DEEPEST ANGUISH—IS RIGHT AND NATURAL AND INEVITABLE.

The thing that is REALLY wrong, the thing that is unnatural and dangerous is unchangeableness and the paralysis of contentment.

IT IS AS NATURAL FOR LIFE TO CHANGE AS IT IS FOR LIFE TO BE BORN.

Birth doesn't happen to us only once. If we are healthy souls, it happens to us repeatedly and continually, all through life. The healthier we are, the more often are we born. The more vital we are, the oftener do we shake off life, and take on a new form of vitality.

CHANGE IS JUST LIFE GOING ON—

GOING ON FROM BIRTH TO BIRTH—

UNTIL IT FINALLY COMPLETES THE CYCLE OF THIS EARTHLY PLAN AND PASSES ONWARD, THROUGH THAT GREATEST BIRTH OF ALL—THE BIRTH OF DEATH.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

President Hoover states that he likes fishing even when he doesn't catch any fish.

We always thought that the idea of fishing was to catch fish.

But there is a certain amount of human nature nature in Mr. Hoover's statement.

How many times have you piped two guys get up and argue all day—when neither one of them had an argument?

It's like a worm in an apple. It's liable to work out two ways.

Otherwise, we would have just as much fun in a flooded cellar.

We admit that we are not much of a piscatorial athlete.

We have angled for trout in the Adirondacks, juggled for tarpon in the gulf and jabbed for flounder in Great South Bay.

And the only time we ever caught a fish was when we trolled for sardines in a delicatessen store.

The political attitude toward fishing has changed considerably since the Republicans took over the riparian rights.

When you saw Grover Cleveland driving a load of lumber down the street you knew he was going after planked shad.

Grover was the greatest fishing president we ever had. He was a pip. And he was our first sailor president for he spent his administration in a rowboat.

If President Hoover ain't catching fish then we must not blame him. It's the economy wave Andy Mellon must be baiting Herbert's hook.
